Suspected Marin Bandits Trapped In City Theater

Three Youths Jailed Following San Rafael, Novato Robberies

Three young men were jailed last night in connection with two Marin grocery store holdups and an abortive taxicab holdup in San Francisco in which the suspects' car crashed into a parked auto trying to get away.

Ralph I. Bates and Paul G. Cross, both 21, addresses unknown, were booked into the county jail on armed robbery charges by San Rafael police in the holdup Tuesday of the Tamalpais Market at Second and D streets. Two men took $100 from a clerk.

Dennis R. Bishop, 22, address also unknown, was booked into county jail on an armed robbery charge by Novato police in the holdup of the Roger Wilco market in that city Monday.

Police told this story:

A robber got into a taxicab on Market Street in San Francisco yesterday, took $14 from the driver and forced him to drive around the block. The robber got out of the cab and jumped into a getaway car. But the car ran into a parked car trying to get away and San Francisco police apprehended Cross and a young woman companion, Sylvia Kay Myers, 20, no address.

Two men in the getaway car — the same one San Rafael and Novato police said they sought — escaped.

Miss Myers was released by San Francisco police and, last night, Novato officers, led by Police Chief Robert di Grazia, nabbed Bishop and Bates at a San Francisco theater.

Bishop was said by Novato police to have been in this area for several months, and San Rafael police said they understood Bates and Cross were friends of Bishop's, who came here a few weeks ago.

Novato Det. Sgt. Otto Haiungs said an Italian-made, .380 caliber pistol was found in the getaway car after the collision, along with two B-B guns that looked like .38 and .45 caliber pistols. The suspects were being held in $1,100 bail each.

Chef Killed En Route To Home

A chef from the Sausalito Inn was killed en route home from work early today when his sports car hit a concrete guard rail on Highway 101 just south of the Greenbrae overpass, ejecting him to the pavement.

Albert Franklin Fowler, 35, of Fairfax, was pronounced dead at Marin General Hospital at 2:38 a.m., of extensive head injuries, according to Asst. Coroner E. R. Fontaine.

California Highway Patrolmen Kenneth D. Parker and Robert E. Borzone said Fowler, who was alone, may have fallen asleep at the wheel.

His car apparently crossed the double yellow line between the inside lane and the center divider, the officers said, then veered to the right, skidding into the guard rail.

Fowler lived at 399 Forrest Avenue. He was born in West Virginia. Fontaine was attempting to locate relatives today. His body was taken to Keaton's Mortuary in San Rafael.

Fowler's death pushes the total of Marin traffic fatalities to 26 this year, compared with 21 last year at this time.

MARIN PREPS' GRIDDERS IN GOOD FORM

Marin County Athletic League football teams scored a clean-sweep victory in three inter-league games yesterday, but College of Marin Tars lost their opening game of the season last night at Kentfield.

On the high school front, Tamalpais Indians soundly defeated Salesian of Richmond, 17-6; Terra Linda downed Polytechnic of San Francisco 14-7, and Novato trimmed Petaluma, 14-7.

San Jose City College rallied in the second half to defeat the Marin Tars 29-14.

Tonight it's mighty Vallejo High of the North Bay League against Drake at Kentfield and Montgomery of Santa Rosa at San Rafael.

Pope's First Audience Since His Illness

VATICAN CITY, (AP) — Looking and sounding better than he has in weeks, Pope Paul VI today held his first public audience since he was stricken with a urinary inflammation Sept. 4.

The Pontiff, who turns 70 in just three days, stood in the open air of a balcony overlooking a Vatican City courtyard crowded with 3,500 Croatian pilgrims from Yugoslavia.

Network Suddenly Hit By Technician Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Supervisory personnel directed cameras and handled microphones at American Broadcasting Co. stations today after members of a radio and television technicians union struck and began picketing.

A network spokesman said the walkout, called yesterday by the AFL-CIO National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians (NABET), was not expected to affect programming, including today's regional football games.

"We're anticipating a complete schedule as would be normal, including the football games which will be handled by staff personnel," a spokesman said. Most weekend offerings have already been taped.

The union also broke off contract talks with the National Broadcasting Co. yesterday but called no strike against that network. It gave no explanation.

The technician's union, which turned down proposed new contracts with both networks last Tuesday, said ABC had rejected new proposals made Thursday.

Live programming beginning next week could suffer if performer and announcer members of AFTRA continue to honor picket lines.

The Columbia Broadcasting System—the third major network—was not involved in the dispute, its technicians being represented by another union, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

NABET has asked for an increase in current average wages of $218 a week to $275. The tentative agreement rejected by union members would have boosted salaries to $252 a week over a two-year period.

Also, the union has demanded a 32-hour, four-day week. The companies had offered to retain the present 40-hour week for the first two years of the contract and a reduction to 37½ hours in the third year.

Bay Fill Developers Cautioned Of Need For Earthquake Study

A San Francisco structural engineer urged the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission yesterday to name a panel of experts to screen bay fill proposals against possible earthquake menace.

The engineer, Karl Steinbrugge, speaking before commissioners at the Marin Rod and Gun Club in San Rafael, said the board of consultants should consist of geologists and engineers "so that there would be no construction on fills that might not be safe."

"Present engineering practices are not necessarily on the side of conservatism," he said, "and soil engineering is largely unpoliced. This does not leave us assured that everything will come out all right," he added.

Such a board, Steinbrugge conceded, could offer only "judgments, no definite answers."

He proposed creation of the board in a talk on earthquake damage he and a team of engineers observed last month in Caracas, Venezuela. Most of the 275 persons killed in the "moderate" earthquake, he noted, were in modern high-rise apartments "built on California building code standards."

Principal lesson from the earthquake, Steinbrugge said, is that soils can determine structural damage regardless of the quality of construction.

In other business, commissioners approved a report on appearance and design of bay development, and granted, 17-0, a fill permit to San Francisco Port Authority for a platform outboard of the Ferry Building to anchor and protect Bay Area Rapid Transit District's transbay tube.

An office building, parking garage, heliport and restaurant will be built on the platform.

Classroom Beating Brings Jail

A San Rafael man was booked into county jail yesterday after he allegedly beat and threatened to kill a seventh grade boy in front of his teacher and classmates at Santa Venetia School.

Basil W. Sakellaris, 39, of 89 Golden Hinde Boulevard, was booked on suspicion of assault and battery, and disturbing the peace, the sheriff's department reported. His alleged victim was Robert Jeffrey Caveney, 12, of 16 Drakes Cove, San Rafael.

Jeffrey's teacher, Marjorie C. Mohror, 30, of Point Reyes Station, told deputies Sakellaris came into her classroom shortly after 9 a.m. and asked to see Jeffrey. When the boy stood up, she said, Sakellaris grabbed him by the neck of his shirt and slapped him four times across his face.

Sakellaris told Jeffrey he had "sent my boy home emotionally disturbed," and said something about a fight between Jeffrey and his son, George, Mrs. Mohror said.

Mrs. Mohror told deputies she

Soviets Promise More Arms Aid To Vietnamese

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union promised North Vietnam today weapons and other supplies in a 1968 aid program that was hinted to be larger than the current estimated billion-dollar-a-year program.

The weapons will include defensive arms, such as antiaircraft guns and missiles for use against U.S. planes, and small arms and artillery that could be used offensively in South Vietnam.

An official announcement of aid agreements signed here today lacked details on the volume of aid. The Soviet Union never has announced how much it is sending to Hanoi.

But the announcement spoke of support for North Vietnam "in conditions of growing U.S. aggression in Vietnam" and the Kremlin has promised in the past to match any increase of the American war effort with more aid.

Fire Kills Four In Nursing Home; Teens Save Many

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI)—Fire raged through a nursing home here early today, claiming four lives. A group of teen-agers who rushed to the scene was credited with saving many of the other 53 patients from death in the flames. Police said all 57 patients in the home had been accounted for. All but two of the patients were elderly.

The bodies of three women patients were found in the charred ruins and a fourth victim, a man, died a few hours later at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Police said two cars containing 14 teen-agers rushed to the Craycroft Nursing home from an all night restaurant when they saw the fire engines.

Police credited the teen-agers "with saving many lives by going through the choking smoke and dragging them (the patients) out."

A witness reported seeing two teen-age girls manage to drag out a man weighing about 190 pounds from the burning building.

China Travelers Report Fighting

HONG KONG (AP) — Fierce fighting between forces for and against Mao Tse-tung was reported in the eastern part of China's southern Kwantung Province, by travelers arriving here from China today.

They said fighting was the heaviest in the East River region, where the rebels are loyal to Canton Mayor Tsiang Cheng. The mayor is reportedly under house arrest in Peking.

Gromyko Willing To Let Big Four Discuss Vietnam

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The Vietnam war could be a topic at the Big Four foreign ministers meeting next week, the Soviet Union's Andrei A. Gromyko said today. But he indicated someone else would have to bring it up.

Gromyko said the Middle East problem "presumably will be discussed" at Secretary General U Thant's "discussion dinner" Tuesday in Thant's 38th-floor office at the United Nations.

Invitations to the parley have also been accepted by Secretary of State Dean Rusk, British Foreign Secretary George Brown and French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville. Their chief U.N. delegates will also attend.

THANT EFFORT

Thant, in his diplomatic efforts to end the war in Vietnam, has said he is acting in his personal capacity. Vietnam was not introduced as a topic for the current General Assembly. But it is expected to be a prime topic throughout the general policy debate.

Gromyko was asked if he would object to discussing Vietnam. His reply was simply: any side could raise any issues it pleased at the dinner.

Should Vietnam come up, Gromyko and U.S. Ambassador Arthur Goldberg could go into the question they each referred to before the General Assembly the last two days: if the United States stopped bombing North Vietnam, would North Vietnam negotiate?

"COULD" CITED

On Thursday, Goldberg noted that North Vietnam had said that if the bombing stopped, talks "could" begin not that they "would" begin.

Yesterday Gromyko referred to a North Vietnamese statement on Jan. 28 "about readiness to begin negotiations on a settlement of the Vietnam problem after the cessation by the United States of the bombing and other aggressive acts" against it.

The Soviet foreign minister said the American reply to this statement was "barbarous bombings" in the North and a troop buildup in the South. North Vietnam's standard position has been that the United States is the aggressor and must take all its troops out of South Vietnam.

Gromyko told the assembly that "peace may be brought about in Vietnam solely as a result of the withdrawal of the aggressors."

Percy Favors LBJ Loss To Hasten Peace

SACRAMENTO (AP) — North Vietnam might be more willing to negotiate the war if the United States had "a different face, a different party" in the White House, says Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill.

A change of administration might provide a "face-saving device" in attempts to help end the fighting, Percy told a news conference in the State Capitol.

Asked if he thought it would be a significant step, Percy replied, "Yes, I think so."

Percy said a scholar who recently returned from North Vietnam was asked by a "high-ranking" Communist official, "Why would you think we could negotiate in good faith with the Johnson administration when the American people don't have faith in him?"

The scholar was not identified. Nor did Percy say if the North Vietnamese spokesman specifically indicated there would be a better chance for negotiations if a Republican was elected president.

Percy added, "I think they feel it (the Johnson administration) has misrepresented what was going on in Vietnam to the American people and if so, it certainly would misrepresent it to the enemy."

Percy said Johnson had failed to make a "really credible, serious attempt to negotiate."

Meanwhile, Percy put himself in opposition to Republican Gov. Ronald Reagan of California by rejecting further escalation of the war.

U.S. Bombers Strive To Halt Red Pressure

SAIGON (UPI) — American heavy and light bombers teamed with jet fighters today to smash North Vietnamese artillery that has been battering the U.S. Marine outpost at Con Thien from positions inside and above the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ), spokesmen said.

The heavy air strikes succeeded in knocking out three big Communist positions and spokesmen said incoming artillery fire on Con Thien was reduced to its lowest point this month.

One flight of Marine F4 Phantoms destroyed a North Vietnamese cannon as it was lobbing high explosive shells at Leatherneck units strung along the southern fringe of the DMZ.

U.S. Air Force F4C Phantom jets and B57 Canberra bombers hit two other Communist artillery positions and pilots reported heavy damage at both.

High-flying B52 Stratofortress bombers thundered in over the thick cloud cover above the DMZ for the second straight day today and struck at artillery, antiaircraft and supply sites about 12 miles north of Con Thien in North Vietnam.

Con Thien has been under a virtual state of siege from North Vietnamese forces operating from the DMZ and the southern fringes of North Vietnam. The Communists have been slamming a daily average of 400 rounds of rocket, mortar and artillery fire on the base. In one 72-hour stretchs ending Friday more than 400 Marines were killed or wounded by the Communist barrages.

In a delayed report, the U.S. Military Command announced that 16 Marines were killed and 33 wounded in the ground fighting on Thursday. Thirteen North Vietnamese were killed in the action, spokesmen said.

U.S. officials estimate the North Vietnamese have massed about 35,000 troops in the border area. The Communist forces are bringing heavy pressure on the string of American border posts, particularly Con Thien.

Thousands Of Mexicans Fleeing Beulah's Flood

RIO GRANDE CITY, Tex. (AP) — The Cameron County Sheriff's Department said today that all residents of Matamoros and Roynosa, Mexico, were being evacuated into the United States ahead of floods triggered by Hurricane Beulah.

The floods are expected on the Rio Grande, normally a turgid stream dividing Texas and Mexico but now more than a mile wide here.

Matamoros is a city of 100,000 and Roynosa has 75,000 residents.

The greatest mass of floodwaters in more than three decades thundered down the Rio Grande, but cities on the U.S. side have considerable protection from levees.

The Nueces River, roughly paralleling the Rio Grande to the east and emptying into Corpus Christi Bay, is expected to reach the highest flood stage in history.

Roynosa is across from McAllen, about 50 miles upstream from Brownsville. It is an industrial center with a large oil refinery and rail yards. It is a popular entry into Mexico.

It's Official— Autumn Is Here

Fall began in Marin today, but you couldn't tell it from the weather.

Continued fair and warm weather was forecast, although nights will be cooler.

The autumnal equinox occurred at 10:38 a.m., when the sun crossed the equator to the Southern Hemisphere. The sun has been over the Northern Hemisphere since March 21.

ALL ARE WELCOME

IT'S A DIALOGUE — Michigan's Gov. George Romney and his wife Lenore exchange views with hippie spokesman Allen Cohen, editor of the Oracle, in San Francisco's Golden Gate Park Panhandle. The touring, potential GOP presidential candidate shared a Digger dinner with hundreds of "flower children" in the city last night. (UPI Telephoto)

Romney Shares In Hippie Feast, Finds Few Common Viewpoints

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Michigan Gov. George Romney broke bread with San Francisco's flower children. But they found little else to share.

Romney and his wife rode into the heart of hippieland in a pickup truck last night and had a wild 20 minutes in the Golden Gate Panhandle where the Diggers — who help feed hungry hippies—dished up a free meal of chicken, corn on the cob, and salad to the Romneys and dozens of bearded, beaded and barefoot Haight-Ashbury residents.

More than 200 hippies surrounded the Michigan chief executive and at first shouted slogans before quieting down to listen to him.

Shouts of "Peace!" "Legalize pot!" "Get the National Guard out of Detroit!" and "Get out of Vietnam!" filled the air before somebody said, "We've got this man here and we're not listening to him. Let him speak." Others helped to quiet down the crowd and a dialogue began.

Asked if he would legalize marijuana, Romney, a Mormon, shook his head.

"No," he said. "I don't believe in the use of alcohol, tobacco or other drugs."

A Negro told the GOP presidential possibility that having black skin and going to war emasculates man. An Indian named Rolling Thunder complained that the government breaks treaties.

The dinner ended with Romney commenting, "You people believe in the concept of giving rather than taking and in that we are in agreement." He later said he appreciated the hippies' frankness and found the discussion "meaningful."

But Allen Cohen, 26-year-old editor of the San Francisco Oracle, a hippie tabloid, bluntly termed the meeting as a "circus."

Flower Children Viewed As Possible Power—If

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—An Oklahoma psychiatrist feels that the hippies could be a revolutionary force—if they can get the monkey off their back.

Dr. Louis J. West, a University of Oklahoma scholar now visiting Stanford's Center for Advanced Study in Behavioral Sciences, discussed the hippies yesterday before the staid Commonwealth Club.

He said the hippies represent one of three rebellions now going on that are manned by young people. The others are the black rebellion, mostly economic and social, and the New left, political and intellectual.

Dr. West called the hippie revolution "religious and mystical."

Instead of trying to change the world through political activism, he said they are trying to withdraw from the competitive society.

The great challenge to the hippie movement, the psychiatrist added, is whether it can preserve its values without the "drug experiences that led to these insights."

Addiction to drugs will keep the rebellion "so unproductive it won't be able to maintain itself."

Dr. West, who has done research in the Haight-Ashbury district of San Francisco, said the hippie rebellion has not yet peaked.

"Why, it's just getting started in Oklahoma," he said. "It's spreading all over the country and growing as fast as marijuana—which is very fast."

Mill Valley Cyclist In Fair Condition

Daniel G. Burns, 26, of 570 Panoramic Highway, Mill Valley, was in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital with injuries received when his motorcycle crashed yesterday.

The crash bar on his motorcycle dug into the pavement when Burns was rounding a curve at Molino Avenue and Edgewood Avenue, Mill Valley police said. The motorcycle skidded into a ditch and Burns suffered head injuries.

Doctor's Revival Order Shocks, But Is Praised

LONDON (AP) — A hospital superintendent who advised his medical staff to "let certain patients" die if their hearts stopped, has been commended for his "initiative" but criticized for the way he went about it.

A committee set up to study the case of Dr. William McMath, superintendent of Neasden Hospital, said in a report Friday night that the wording of his staff memorandum was "particularly unfortunate."

McMath's memorandum put out in May 1966, said: "The following patients are not to be resuscitated: very elderly, over 65; malignant disease; chronic chest disease; chronic renal (kidney) disease."

The report found that no patient who might have benefited by resuscitative treatment failed to receive it. The health ministry had ordered the instructions withdrawn at the hospital and a spokesman said today that no such antiresuscitation instructions were in force in any of the other 2,550 national health service hospitals in England and Wales.

The report said: "Although Dr. McMath's initiative in attempting to guide the medical staff on the selection of patients for resuscitation is in itself to be commended, we regard the wording of the memorandum as particularly unfortunate, and we greatly deplore its distribution in a way which rendered it liable to public view."

The report said that the idea of issuing guidance for resuscitation after heart failure came from a discussion among the medical staff of the Central Middlesex Hospital Management Committee group. The group decided that advice was needed "in light of experience of wrong use of the resources available."

Miss Esther Rickards, chairman of the North-West Metropolitan Regional Hospital Board who led the inquiry, said: "Dr. McMath is not criticized for his views or ideas but purely for the way in which they were expressed."

Civil Rights Leader Claims Death Threats

SAN JOSE (UPI) — A Negro instructor at San Jose State College whose demands for equality led to threats of violence and sweeping policy changes said yesterday racial extremists have fingered him for death.

Harry Edwards, 24, assistant professor of sociology and former San Jose State basketball star, told a rally of 1,000 students that he had received 12 letters threatening death and promising he would not survive the weekend.

Edwards, whose civil rights activities caused cancelation of tonight's football home opener, told the cheering rally he had accepted a proposal by college administrators to review his charges of discrimination in athletic programs, in housing and in fraternities.

Following the accusations, college president Dr. Robert D. Clark, fearing "mass violence," canceled the game with Texas Western, placed all 27 fraternities and sororities on probation for "breeding discrimination," and initiated a program to help minority groups.

Auto Stolen

Dorothy Jane Snyder of 17 Shell Road, Mill Valley, reported Wednesday evening to sheriff's deputies that her car was stolen during the day while parked at Ross General Hospital, deputies reported today. Her car is a green 1964 Rambler, license DPU 979.

Economics Expert In Cal Hot Seat

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Charles J. Hitch, a cigar-smoking economics whiz, had his work cut out today as the president-elect of the mammoth University of California with its spiraling costs and burgeoning student body.

A former Defense Department efficiency expert, Hitch will take over the helm of the nation's largest university Jan. 1, 1968, bringing a record of cost-cutting and a relative anonymity.

The budget-conscious university Board of Regents elected Hitch unanimously yesterday at its meeting at the UCLA campus. Gov. Ronald Reagan, who has threatened to push for a tuition to meet costs, gave his blessing.

As president, Hitch will receive $45,000 a year.

Hitch, who turned 57 this month, will continue as university vice president in the interim before stepping up to the presidency being filled temporarily by Harry R. Wellman. Hitch said it was an honor to be asked to be president.

"Universities are often not comfortable with the surrounding society," he said. "They cannot be and should not be, because they are agents and harbingers of change, being concerned with ideas and values, with the whole sweep of man's experience and with the scientific frontier.

"If you find a university that is not striking some sparks, you can assume that it is dead."

The university's top post has been vacant since Jan. 20 when Clark Kerr was fired by the regents for his handling of student protestors at the Berkeley campus, scene of massive sit-ins and unrest.

Kerr, now head of the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education and a professor of economics at the Berkeley campus, lauded Hitch as "an excellent scholar, an experienced administrator and a superb analyst. I wish nim well in his arduous new responsibility."

Ken Stahl, student body vice president at Berkeley, said Hitch was a "compromise" choice—"someone who isn't particularly important to either side among the regents . . . If they appointed someone who really cared about education, they would have a fight."

Hitch joined the university in 1965 as vice president of finance after serving as comptroller and assistant to Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara. He also was chief of the Rand Corp.'s economics division.

School Strike Truce Nearer In New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Mediators reported today narrowing points of difference in a contract dispute that threatened to prolong the New York City teachers' walkout into a third week.

The dispute led Albert Shanker, president of the AFL-CIO United Federation of Teachers, to declare yesterday that teachers would continue their strike against the 1.1-million-pupil public school system instead of returning as expected on Monday.

Vincent D. McDonnell, chairman of the State Mediation Board, said early today after a seven-hour secret session with both sides that the points of disagreement had been reduced from 24 to 3.

McDonnell said Shanker would confer with other union officials about the 3 remaining points and then contact the negotiators for the board of education before noon today and try to reach final agreement.

Robber Given Unwanted Gift In Bank's Bag

MARRERO, La. (AP) — Bank teller Karen Paciera included a nasty surprise when she stuffed a holdup man's sack with $11,500.

A delayed action booby trap tear gas bomb in the sack spewed out its acrid gas a few minutes after the gunman reached the getaway car yesterday.

Deputies converging on the scene after the First National Bank of Jefferson sounded an alarm said they spotted the getaway car moving slowly and uncertainly along an expressway about eight blocks away.

Detective Capt. William Warner identified the weeping occupants as Charles Guillot, 43, of Glendale, and Ann Allen Boaz, 40, of nearby New Orleans, who was driving. They were charged with armed robbery.

The money was recovered.

Marks was enroute from Athens on the fifth leg of his round-the-world flight when his radio batteries began to fail. He circled for two hours over wild country in northern Iran before finally contacting the Tehran airport.

Port Chicago Defender Gains

PORT CHICAGO (AP)—Rep. Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., says there is a chance the city of Port Chicago may not be bought by the Navy and razed as a buffer zone around its ammunition loading docks.

The congressman said yesterday the Senate Armed Forces Committee had revised a House-approved measure to spend $20,079,000 to buy the 5,021 acre city.

Waldie said the Senate committee noted it was "not entirely satisfied that the current proposal by the Navy is the most desirable solution to this problem."

He said the committee also inserted a phrase that would commit Defense Secretary Robert McNamara to selecting "an alternate proposal if it is deemed more appropriate."

Waldie says he will press for an alternate plan, combining stricter safety regulations at the Port Chicago Naval Weapons Station and the relocation of two docks.

Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. scheduled plea entry for 1:30 p.m. Friday. He also granted attorney A. Leonard Bjorklund Jr.'s request that the search warrant and supporting statement used in a Thursday raid on Frazier's home be made available.

Frazier, free without bail, did not appear in court yesterday. He is accused of having 11 fighting cocks on his small farm just north of Stinson Beach on Shoreline Highway, and possessing hundreds of steel gaffs used as weapons on cocks' legs.

Dist. Bruce B. Bales and sheriff's officers raided the farm after they said Frazier advertised his gaffs — made in his machine shop — in a national magazine. A sheriff's deputy also reported hearing the cocks crowing at Frazier's home.

The live fowls and other evidence were confiscated in the raid. Bales said he has no evidence of cock-fighting in Marin.

Fragile Diatoms Play Key Role In Sea Life

By SCIENCE SERVICE

An exquisitely designed, microscopic water plant, looking as fragile as a snow crystal, has the toughness and durability to withstand immense pressures beneath the sea for millions of years.

The diatoms, one-celled members of the algae family, existed in great profusion as far back as 28 million years ago — and their descendants are still going strong today.

These ornate, free-floating plants have the ability to extract glass-like silica from the seawater and build themselves lacy quartz casings in many shapes and forms — from triangular shapes to those like footballs, ice needles, hourglasses, or tiny pill boxes. Each creature has two halves to its single cell, with one-half slightly larger and overlapping the other, somewhat like the parts of a pill box. They reproduce by splitting and dividing into two daughter halves, each one of which generates another half to fit its shape.

Several thousand species are known today. Many of these tiny cells attach themselves to rocks, logs or other plants, but some are able to move independently by slow rhythmic movements — somewhat unusual behavior for these plants that manufacture their own food through photosynthesis. Some scientists group these part-animal, part-time creatures as protists.

Today's diatoms populate the surface waters in many places throughout the world. They are found in the top 600 feet of the Atlantic and Pacific, and other oceans, in fresh water ponds and rivers, but their greatest numbers are found in the cool Antarctic waters where they are the chief food supply for the huge whales and other sea creatures such as copepods, oysters and young fish.

Those that are not eaten in the never-ending chain of ocean life eventually die, and their tiny skeletons drift gently down through the dark waters to the bottom of the sea. Here, still maintaining their intricate structure, they harden into a light, porous shale called diatomite.

Rich beds of this material have been found near the central part of the California Coast Ranges and in areas bordering the Mediterranean Sea.

Japan, Russia, Canada, Africa and other nations have found deposits, which are dredged and used for many purposes — as filters for public drinking water and swimming pools, dyes and oils; as insulating materials for boiler furnaces and other industrial equipment; and as fine abrasives for polishes.

New Type Desks Help Students

Tobacco Has Impact On Red Rulers

NEW YORK (SS) — Economic pressure from tobacco advertising has seeped through the Iron Curtain.

Representatives of Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and Romania reported recently to the World Conference on Smoking and Health here that although they try to regulate smoking and cigarette advertising by their own tobacco salesmen, they equitably accept Western advertising because of the (capitalist) money involved.

For 11 years Czechoslovakia has been trying to protect nonsmokers by prohibiting cigarette smoking in buses, theaters, hospitals, and schools. Tourists, however, are permitted to smoke wherever they like.

Hungary has problems of alcoholism and tuberculosis that are considered more pressing than the cigarette problem. Nevertheless research on smoking and health is being pursued. One research project now under way concerns the effect of smoking on the development of the fetus; another deals with the effect on sperm.

At the final session of the conference last week, a government attorney bitterly attacked the health organizations who sponsored the meeting for abdicating their role.

John F. Banzhaf of the Federal Communications Commission, who was the prime mover in the decision that cigarette advertising on the air should mean equal time for anti-smoking ads, said that the organizations' failure to help defend and enforce the decision is "outrageous, deplorable and reprehensible."

He charged that the charitable health organizations have not made demands for free time that would be worth $50 million on television for fear that broadcasters would take away free time now given them for fund-raising appeals.

In a plea to the delegates he said the decision may soon be overturned and in any case cannot be enforced effectively unless an aroused public opinion forces the health organizations into the fight. (The decision is under industry attack in the courts.)

Replying to the attack, Dr. Ashbel C. Williams, president of the American Cancer Society, said:

"Because we have had no experience with legal matters related to broadcasting, we have followed the advice of our attorneys who warned that charitable organizations should not get involved. It is possible that we will change our position."

Nuclear Worker Hospitalized

WEST VALLEY, N.Y. (AP) — An employee at the Nuclear Fuel Services Inc. plant has been hospitalized after radioactive plutonium was detected in his body, the firm said last night.

A spokesman said the patient, who was not identified, has experienced no ill effects and none are expected after treatment for removal of the substance is completed.

Plant officials suspect that the exposure occurred during the removal of protective clothing that had become contaminated during a sampling operation, the spokesman added. It was the first instance here in which medical treatment was considered advisable, they said.

School Lends Parents Hand On Math

HANNOVER, Germany (GF) — An adult high school in Hannover, concerned about the helplessness of many parents when their children seek advice about math homework, plans to offer a course in the future it hopes may offer a solution.

In future semesters, the high school will offer a refresher course for grown-ups called "Mathematics for Adults." Parents will also get a taste of so-called "new math" in the course, so junior won't throw them off base with questions along that line.

As soon as the plans were made public, phones began ringing at the high school. Several parents have already signed up for the first course.

Hannover's adult high school successful institutions of that belongs to West Germany's most kind. The city has a population of 550,000 and last year alone more than 22,000 grown-ups attended the school, where 550 courses, seminars and group discussion classes were offered.

Pisa Tower Won't Fall Very Soon

AACHEN, Germany (GF) — The famous Leaning Tower of Pisa is in no immediate danger of collapsing.

This is the view of Prof. Edgar Schulze, of Aachen's School of Technology, who recently returned from a trip to Italy and a fresh survey of the tower. Professor Schulze belongs to a special six-member committee, set up by Rome's Ministry for Public Works in 1964, to assure the preservation of the renowned structure. In addition to Schulze, one English and four Italian scientists are on the committee.

Despite Professor Schulze's conclusion, concern about the leaning tower's future continues. Though at a snail's pace, the leaning continues and a meticulous shoring up will be required one day.

For that purpose, world firms with special knowledge and experience of such projects, are expected to be asked to make bids in 1968 if they would like to work on Pisa.

The bids will be accompanied with an outline of how each firm plans to tackle the job.

New Town Looks To Education

LITCHFIELD PARK, Ariz. (UPI)—There will be no need for residents of this planned community to send their children "away" to college.

The colleges will rise on a 525-acre site donated to the University by a rubber company which is guiding the long-term development of Litchfield Park as a subsidiary. The ASU Litchfield Park branch campus is expected to have facilities for accommodating about 15,000 students by 1980.

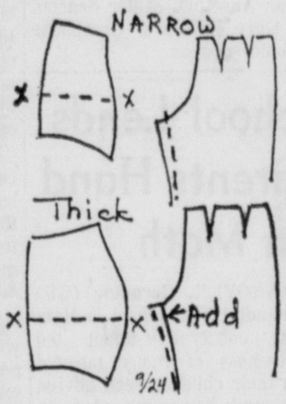
Achieving Perfect Fit In Pants Suit

By EUNICE FARMER

The climate where I live is so cold that we gals really were happy to see the popular pants suit is going strong for another year. My problem is this. I measure the same as the pattern, but the crotch doesn't seem to be roomy enough for me. How can I make this adjustment? — MRS. R. M.



DEAR MRS. R. M.:

I think by now, most of you realize that measurements are far from the most important part of adjusting patterns to fit. The contour of your body is the important point to consider. One woman could measure the same in the hips as another and yet one would be narrow across the width of the hips but thicker from front to back. Another could be thin from front to back and wide across the hips.

For the more rounded figure, you will add to the width of the inner leg seam both front and back. For the flatter figure, take off some of the inner leg seam both front and back.

Since most women have adapted the pant suit as a way of life, it is more and more important to find a pattern that truly can be adjusted to fit every figure. The closest I have ever seen to the perfect answer is a pattern that was designed by a European pattern maker and is now available to you. It takes time to figure out, however, it has detailed instructions for almost every type of figure imaginable.

One pattern can be adjusted to fit every size and also makes 11 different styles which justifies the higher than average price of the pattern. If you cannot find this pattern by this description, send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope and I will send you the information about this pattern.

Mrs. Russell Gear, Boca Raton, Fla., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following suggestion.

With belts gaining in popularity, my pet peeve has always been eyelets that fray and pull out. I solved this by making my eyelets with a standard paper punch. Then, carefully coat the cut edges with glue that will dry transparent.

You will also find that if you reinforce the buttonholes in ready-mades the same way before they have been worn, they will last many times longer.

DEAR EUNICE,

I don't like sleeveless blouses for myself, so I tried making a cap sleeve, as per your instructions which I had saved. The blouse looks great by itself, but when I wear my jacket, the ridge from the cap sleeves shows through the jacket and doesn't look right. What did I do wrong? — MRS. M. M. R.

DEAR MRS. M. M. R.:

A cap sleeve is not always the best sleeve for a jacket with set in sleeves. Perhaps your blouse was linen or other heavy fabric instead of a crepe or sheer. If the cap appears bulky and shows, try tapering it in closer to your arm, beginning at the edge of your shoulder. The closer it fits your arm the smoother it will appear.

DEAR EUNICE,

I would like to make my husband a silk sport shirt for Christmas, but am afraid it will look feminine. How can we choose the correct fabric and do I have to use silk thread? — MRS. V. T.

DEAR MRS. V. T.:

Look in the men's department at your better shops and you will see the silks that are used in men's shirts. Solid colors, tiny jacquard weaves, and stripes are the most common fabrics. I would try to find lightweight, washable, pongee type silk, however, today anything seems to go.

No, it is not necessary to use pure silk thread when stitching silk fabric. Mercerized thread that is made today has the elasticity needed and is much easier to work with unless you are used to sewing with silk thread.

'Mousetrap' Suffers Many Shortcomings

By KARL BARRON

"The Mousetrap," Agatha Christie's mystery thriller which has been playing in London for the past fifteen years or so, received its San Francisco premiere last night at the Interplayers, 747 Beach Street.

Anyone expecting a play which has run longer than "Abie's Irish Rose" to be better than "Abie's Irish Rose" is due for a disappointment.

"The Mousetrap" is typical Aggie, slow in starting, hammering home its facts indelibly until one wants to scream or, as a gent behind us did, snore. The only way a Christie can be bearable is in a production by English actors, or professionals who can carry the necessary English clipped speech at breakneck speed and yet remain articulate.

When Miss Christie gets her plot under way is becomes fairly exciting, but still must be kept going at top speed or it creaks. And it is almost totally lacking in humor.

"Three Blind Mice" is the nursery rhyme the author has used to plot this one. (Remember "Ten Little Indians"?) A woman is murdered, an odd assortment of potential killers is snowbound in a guest house run by a young couple, and of seven people one is the killer, two are remaining "mice" waiting to have their tails cut off. To say any more is to give away a plot which gave itself away to me at the beginning of the second act. You may be luckier.

PACE NOR PUNCH

The Interplayers' production, directed by Harry S. Wheelan, has neither the pace nor the punuch to bring off Miss Christie's who-is-going-to-do-it. Wheelan has obviously labored at getting some life into his performers, but fails.

On the plus side, Cathy Wright turns in an involved and at times passionate portrayal as the young wife suddenly faced with the fact that her husband may be a murderer. She maintains a clipped, rapid speech which I found understandable at all times, and which shows moments of great power.

Robert J. Rumpf's young architect is vital and believable, with Norman MacLeod and Marie Goff turning in creditable performances.

The rest of the less than adequate cast is topped by the incredible Mr. Paravicini (that is Italian, isn't it?), played by Pernu Heribert in a dialect which switches intermittently from German to Japanese, punctuated by horrid shrill laughter that may haunt my dreams.

ALL IS DULL

The set by Lyle Collins is an unimaginative box which does nothing to detract from the general aura of dullness which is the production's hallmark. Performances of "The Mousetrap" are at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays.

Managing director Henry Stein is lucky in that on the next corner, at the Playhouse, he has a superlative production of Gogol's "The Inspector-General." He's batting .500.

CONCERT BY PIANIST

Pianist Jeffrey Siegel will open the Dominican College Concert Artists series at 8 p.m. Oct. 2 at Angelico Hall on the campus in San Rafael. Works by Mozart, Franck, Debussy and Hindemith are on the program.

Domenico Will Host 11 Schools' Girls

Girls from 11 Bay Area private schools will enter the 34th annual San Domenico Play Day Oct. 14 at the school in Sleepy Hollow.

About 400 girls will compete in riding competition, swimming, volley ball, field hockey, badminton, tennis and archery in the day-long event.

Reed Trustees Give $67,116 In Pay Hikes

The Reed School District has used most of its share of new state aid to grant $67,116 in pay raises to 147 employees, including teachers and Supt. H. Joe Edgington.

Trustees unanimously approved the pay hikes Thursday night. Edgington said $50,000 had been set aside for raises in the budget, but that no action could be taken until funds under AB 272 were allocated the district.

The state aid totaled $28,000.

Increases totaling $39,966 were awarded 98 teachers and other certified personnel. Edgington said that, instead of across-the-board hikes, sliding raises were tacked onto salary ranges to make them more competitive.

Forty-five secretaries, custodians and allied employees won hikes totaling $8,722.

Edgington was granted a $925 annual boost to $19,425, while principals Robert Gow of Del Mar School won an $800 increase to $16,800 annually and Jack Usilton of Reed School a $750 annual boost to $15,750.

In other business, trustees denied a back-pay claim of resigned teacher Margaret Macauley for $265, asked the county for a loan of $275,000 until 1968 fiscal property taxes begin to be collected, named Roy Fisher of Hilarita Housing a crossing guard at Reed School on top of his custodial duties, and accepted the resignation of Reed School teacher Ronald J. Kandle.

Street Lighting Decision Delayed

A hearing into a change in the type of street lighting was opened at a meeting of the Marinwood Community Services District Thursday but continued until members had time to view the two systems.

Director Donald A. Duerr reported the proposal was to change from incandescent to mercury lighting and to reduce the number of lights from 179 to 157.

Approval was given for a 5 per cent step increase for Fire Chief James Cameron to bring his monthly salary to $750.

Folk Dancers Due At College

The Punjab Folk Dance Troupe will show dances of India at 8 p.m. Monday at the College of Marin.

A lecture and demonstration will open the program at 8 p.m. at the theater of the college's fine arts complex.

Included in the program are songs and dances of Indian farmers rejoicing at a good harvest. The dance program is part of the annual concert-lecture series.

Marin City Shootings Aftermath Questioned

The Marin City Community Services District will invite county Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos to its Oct. 19 meeting in an attempt to learn the outcome of Marin City shooting incidents that occurred on July 27 this year.

"Nowhere in the community," director Charles W. Story said, has the district been able to find out what followed the shootings.

In the incidents, 6-year-old Angela Dedrick and her grandfather, Charles Armstead, 62, were wounded by a stray bullet while asleep, and a 17-year-old youth, Melvin White, was shot in the hip by sheriff's deputies after reportedly shooting at a passing patrol car.

The board discussed at a meeting Thursday night a plan to nominate five persons for two posts on the county redevelopment agency and housing authority but reached no decision on the method of selection. The plan will be discussed further Oct. 19.

The board also heard a report that construction of the Manzanita Community Center is on schedule.

Harbor Point Lot Again Protested

Harbor Point property owners are appealing a ruling of the Marin County Planning Department of Aug. 28 approving a land division for Stanley W. Taylor.

The appeal, on the agenda at the 9 a.m. meeting Monday of the county planning commission, is signed by the executive committee of the Harbor Point No. 1 Owners Improvement Association, Vernon I. Dwelly, Joseph Del Valle, Jr., Raymond Kalisi, James P. Langton and John M. Kahl.

They contend the lot division would not be compatible with the subdivision and its "heavy private deed restrictions," and feel the removal of trees and vegetation would change the character and weather of the neighborhood. They say also it would be difficult to place one house on the undivided lot.

The appeal is another in a series by property owners protesting the plans of Taylor, a San Francisco developer, to reduce the sizes of homesites he owns in Harbor Point.

Festival Planning

The Mill Valley Fall Arts Festival board will meet at 7:45 p.m. Tuesday in city hall to continue planning for the Oct. 14-15 festival.

Northgate Post Office Bidders Being Sought

Bids for operation of a non-delivery post office at Northgate Shopping Center are being solicited by the Post Office Department.

The service would replace the present post office at Noma's Gift and Craft shop. The service, operated by Mr. and Mrs. William K. Noma, owners of the store, will end Oct. 1 because the couple plans to sell the store, the post office department reported.

The post office had been located at the gift shop for more than a year, under a contract renewed in July. The couple had run the office for $4,000 yearly, the Post Office Department reported, after negotiations were held on their bid of $4,500.

A non-delivery post office offers registry service, sells stamps and money orders, insures mail, and offers the other usual post office services other than deliveries.

Bid forms may be obtained from the San Rafael Post Office at 40 Bellam Boulevard, and bids will be accepted until the close of business Wednesday at the Post Office.

GLENWOOD FOREST

Perhaps we are a bit premature, but we have had so many inquiries from people expressing an interest in this beautiful quiet and secluded area, that we have opened a temporary office, and are now taking reservations on the limited number of breathtaking view sites and secluded sites which are encompassed by trees. The new model homes are not built, and the streets are not paved, but the sites are ready. Wear your old clothes because it is dusty. We are sure that when you see this exciting setting, which we feel is outstanding and cannot be duplicated, you will be pleasantly surprised.

Our salesmen will be on the site all day Saturday, Sunday, Sept. 23rd and 24th. During the following week by appointment. The phone at the site is 454-3768 or call 479-9611 for further information.

Total Cuba Quarantine Demanded

Ministers See Photos Of Guerrilla

COMBINED AP & UPI

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Dean Rusk proposed today a four-point program for tightening the Western hemispheric quarantine of Communist Cuba, including an appeal to non-Communist countries to curb trade with Havana.

"The Organization of American States must maintain measures that isolate Cuba from the society of free men" until Premier Fidel Castro quits promoting "subversion and terrorism in the other countries of the hemisphere" and cuts his military ties with Moscow, Rusk said.

Rusk presented the U.S. proposals as the foreign ministers of the 21-nation OAS went into the second day of a three-day special conference on stemming the Castro threat.

VENEZUELA BLAST

Guerrilla-plagued Venezuela called the meeting, accusing Cuba of aggression for its exports of insurgency to other Latin American lands. Other hemisphere ministers have joined in denouncing the Red infiltrations.

Rusk advocated "reasonable steps tailored to the dimensions of the immediate threat" which he said should be neither exaggerated nor ignored. He proposed:

OAS "condemnation and denunciation" of the Castro regime's actions "as flagrant violations of international treaties, of the principles of international law and the standards of conduct among nations."

Serving notice on the Soviets, who are giving Castro a estimated $1-million-a-day aid, that this will impair Moscow's efforts for increased relations elsewhere in Latin America.

Further individual and collective measures by OAS members for "vigilence along our coasts and frontiers" to prevent incursions of men, munitions, money and propaganda from Cuba.

"Seek greater cooperation from our Free World friends in denying to Cuba resources which help it to carry on its subversive activities."

Cuba's trade with non-Communist nations slumped from $1.6 billion in 1958, the last year before Castro's takeover, to about $350 million annually the last two years. The OAS adopted a no-trade policy toward Cuba in 1964 and then asked friendly countries abroad to follow suit.

A mass demonstration of Cuban exiles meantime was forming for a march down Pennsylvania Avenue this morning to a statue of South American liberator Simon Bolivar behind the OAS meeting place near the White House. Some estimates put the number of marchers at up to 10,000.

SLIDE SHOW

Late yesterday, Bolivia put on a dramatic showing of slides, fingerprint comparisons and intelligence reports placing elusive Castro lieutenant Ernesto "Che" Guevara in Bolivia's back country organizing revolution.

As Rusk and other ministers looked on intently, Bolivian Foreign Minister Walter Guevara Arze flashed 21 pictures he said were of Guevara.

Nineteen showed the man identified as Guevara in battle dress, occasionally with a rifle and surrounded by laughing men and a woman in military attire. The other two were pictures Bolivia said it took from bogus Paraguayan passports.

The pictures were believed to be the first concrete evidence of Guevara's whereabouts since the 40-year-old Argentine, credited with providing much of the intelligence behind Castro's takeover of Cuba in the late view in March, 1965.

Middle School Site On Board's Agenda

The Mill Valley School District board will discuss site location for its proposed middle school and set a date for final action when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday at Park School.

The board is also to hear a report on the summer trip to Mexico of the Richardson Bay School Spanish Club.

Driver Fined $200

Wilbur William Weir, 59, of 2072 Hutch Road, Novato, was fined $200 and placed on a year's probation yesterday in Marin Municipal Court for drunken driving on Highway 101 Aug. 30.

Press Gets Told Off— And Opera Proves Point

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL — the world wide news service — held its annual conference for editors and publishers this week in San Francisco.

As one might expect, the press came in for criticism from some invited speakers.

Some of this was planned. Ben Bagdikian, magazine writer and press critic, headed a panel of speakers who had little but criticism for the Fourth Estate.

Other criticism was unplanned.

The mayor of Milwaukee politely but firmly upbraided the press for failing to present the central issues of Milwaukee's racial demonstrating to the American reading public. At least he was constructive; he said plainly what he thinks is the chief issue (differing views on so-called open housing). And while he was about it he observed that the taxpayers of Milwaukee are spending $24,000 per day in extra police costs to protect the protesters' right of freedom of speech.

GOVERNOR REAGAN FIRED off several blasts at the press. He criticized a "North-South press axis" which he indicated somehow treated him unfairly. He didn't elaborate except to say, in response to a question from the audience, that the south end of the critical press axis is the Los Angeles Times. Apparently the Times is surprised, he said, to see him try to do in office the things he said he would do when campaigning. The Times supported Reagan's gubernatorial candidacy editorially.

The governor insisted again he is NOT a presidential candidate.

Why, then, did he sound off so strongly on the Vietnam war only a few days earlier?

That was no different from what he has been saying all along, publicly, he explained. Further, he didn't "sound off" in the ordinary sense. His comments were made in response to questions at a press conference. He did NOT introduce the subject.

And therein lay one of his criticisms. The press, he said, should put such things in perspective.

ALL THIS CRITICISM of the press was voiced on Monday and Tuesday.

Tuesday night there were two significant cultural events in San Francisco.

The opera season opened and a new Civic Light Opera production was premiered. The second of these events had extra significance, since the new show was produced and is receiving its first presentations in Los Angeles and San Francisco before (hopefully) heading east to Broadway.

San Francisco's only morning paper had columns and columns of descriptive material the next day about the gowns worn by "socially prominent" ladies at the opera's opening night. Considerable space was devoted to some opinionated reporting of Governor Reagan's presence at the opera.

Tuesday night's baseball game was pretty thoroughly reported.

But for the music critic's report on what the opera was about and how well it was presented, you had to wait for Thursday's paper.

The pattern was the same for the new Civic Light Opera. You had to wait until Thursday's paper for the critical review in the "Voice of the West."

Wednesday night, Mill Valley's Jane Marsh made her grand opera debut in San Francisco. You could read about it in the next day's Independent-Journal. But you had to wait till Friday to read about it in San Francisco's morning paper.

WHAT CONCLUSION does all this lead to?

How can you ponder such a profound question when the guy at the next desk keeps asking:

"If the leading lady's dress had come unzipped and fallen off opening night, would the 'daily playboy' have waited so long to report it?"

Those who attended the UPI conference with some detachment thought they observed some difference between what certain San Francisco newsmen said in response to criticism on Monday and Tuesday and the way they edited their papers Wednesday and Thursday.

A BELATED BOUQUET to attorney Boris H. Lakusta's able presentation of the case brought rulings at every level against the abandonment, and to him must go major credit for the fact that the service is to be restored next Wednesday.

BRICKBATS to Carel E. H. Mulder, director of the California Office of Health Care Services, for refusing to disclose the names of seven physicians suspended from the Medi-Cal program for unconscionable chiseling.

Nice Salary Plum For Director Of New Bay Government Study

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

California legislators last week stuck taxpayers with a $50,000 bill to pay a man to direct a study of Bay Area regional government.

The burden of his fantastic salary will not be noticed by the time tax bills filter down to the common folk, but the taxpayers' tab feels a little fatter when dipped in the legislative pork barrel. And it gets fatter each time it's dipped.

It was Assemblyman John T. Knox, D-Richmond, who announced appointment of Daniel M. Luevano to direct the 18-month study by the Joint Legislative Committee on Bay Area Organization.

IN FAIRNESS to the able Mr. Knox, however, it should be reported as common knowledge that Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh pushed hard for Luevano's appointment. The speaker reportedly also saw to it that his long-time friend would be handsomely paid.

The $50,000 works out to $33,336 a year, or $2,778 a month. That's about $20,000 more a year than paid directors of other recent legislative studies.

Only about a half dozen officials in the state make more.

ONE ASSEMBLYMAN, explaining Luevano's stratospheric salary, said the appointee's last annual salary was $28,500, that was for a permanent job.

"It's understandable, of course, that he woould get more for a temporary job," the assemblyman said. Of course. When it comes to salaries paid with public money, the escalator only goes up.

In the past six years, the 44-year-old Luevano has served as California's chief deputy director of finance under Hale Champion, as assistant secretary of the Army, and as head of the federal poverty program in the West.

THE CASUAL BLOATING of a political appointee's salary is the point, however, and not Luvano's remarkable record.

Legislators who award high salaries to friends are motivated by more than mere kindness, of course. It is an unwritten rule that friends, once appointed and comfortably nested down with their high salaries, are expected to respond generously to fund drives by their sugar daddies.

Luevano's salary comes out of the $240,000 the legislature appropriated to study the feasibility of creating a regional government in the Bay Area with power over planning, air and water pollution, waste disposal, transportation and other Bay Area-wide problems.

Legislative studies have a way of using up their appropriations, and with $50,000 knocked out of its budget before it even gets started, this committee is not likely to be an exception.

TWO PARALLEL NEEDS

ARE YOUR MOTIVES THE BEST?

How often do you check that your thoughts, words and deeds are based on honorable motives?

Three centuries ago Francois Rochefoucauld pointed out: "We should often have reason to be ashamed of our most brilliant actions if the world could see the motives from which they spring."

A glance at the origin and definition of the word "motive" may help to better appreciate its importance:

It is derived from the Latin "movere, motus" meaning "to move." The dictionary defines it as "that which acts as an inducement to preference or choice . . . or tends to move the will; a strong or impelling influence toward some particular object to be obtained or end to be secured."

Strive continually, with God's help, to leave the world better than you found it. Then there will be less danger of your motives being anything but the best.

If love of people for love of Christ is the mainspring of your life, you will have little trouble in bringing out the best that is in you — and in others.

"He who says he abides in Him ought to walk in the same way in which He walked."
(1 John 2:6)

Help me, O Father, to be motivated by love of You in all that I do.

Setting Hospital Record Straight

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Lest the Department of Mental Hygiene gain the impression that members of Marinites Interested in the Mentally Ill (MIMI) are unrelieable observers and the public be misinformed, please permit me to set the record straight.

The news story in the Sept. 19 issue of you paper conveyed some erroneous impressions.

1. Not all of the more than 3,000 patients at Sonoma are in condemned buildings. A good many buildings are of recent vintage and sound construction.

2. While it is true some patient help is used at Sonoma, the story as submitted to the I-J said that in the 20 wards which lack maintenance staff the technicians in charge og patient care have to manage time for cleaning.

3. By no means are patients being discharged from Sonoma, as your story suggested. We referred to the current trend noted at Napa State Hospital where patients seem to be leaving the acute wards at an accelerated rate.

4. Discharged patients, in contrast to those released on leave status, are no longer the responsibility of the hospital. They may go to Community Mental Health Services for treatment or medication, if they choose.

In conclusion, may I express a word of deep appreciation to the citizens who are giving their own time and effort to traveling regularly to Napa, Mendocino and Sonoma State Hospitals to check on conditions and patient treatment in these institutions as they affect Marin's mentally ill and mentally retarded. This is the obligation assumed by members of MIMI.

Marin's Heritage Entails Responsibility

Editor, Independent-Journal

I am a student of history who has had the privilege of living in San Francisco's fabulous natural north bedroom for nearly 10 years.

A bouquet is in order for you and your staff, especially Florence Donnelly, for the continuing contribution of material on the historic development of this area. The wealth of source material that you have created covers the period from the earliest-known prehistoric inhabitants, the Coast Miwok Indians, down to the latest developments of the Marin Civic Center designed by Frank Lloyd Wright and the continuing activities at Hamilton Air Force Base. In your columns you keep the residents informed of their glorious heritage.

Becoming a citizen of Marin County entails a responsibility to be constantly alert to the necessity of preventing damage or destruction of what has been accomplished by nature and the men who have preceded us; to be always aware of our obligation to protect the natural beauty of a rugged coastline soaring over 2,600 feet to Mount Tamalpais with hidden beaches in sheltered coves and bays which are backed up with hillsides covered with primeval forests, and a wholesome recreation potential for all that is not surpassed anywhere.

You are doing a good job of providing current world and local news, but you also keep readers aware of the spirit that has made this pocket paradise available for us to live quiet and full lives away from the maddening hustle and bustle of the crowded city.

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

A FLYING SAUCER'S mechanism went out of joint, and it came careening into a deep sand trap on the Burning Tree Golf Course. "What do I do now?" the pilot shortwaved to headquarters in outer space. Back came the answer, "Use your number nine iron, you meathead!"

A NEWLY published edition of Ambrose Bierce's "Devil's Dictionary" contains many gems that weren't included in previous compilations. Here are a few of them:

AFFECTIONATE: Addicted to being a nuisance. The most affectionate creature in the world is a wet dog.

FORBIDDEN: Invested with a new and irresistible charm.

Mr. Bierce obviously was a master of circumlocution, which he himself defined as "a literary trick wherby the author who hasn't much to say breaks it gently to the reader."

Rockefeller Not Now Candidate –But He Could Change His Mind

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York's Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller sounds like a man who would love to be president if he could have the Republican nomination handed to him.

He is a long way from having closed all the doors on himself.

In view of some of the things he has said and done in the past, it can be taken with a grain of salt when he says, as he has repeatedly, that "under no circumstances will I be" a candidate for the Republican nomination in 1968.

RECENTLY IN AN interview with The Associated Press, he said, "I'm just not going to be a candidate." This is probably accurate if it means he won't go stumping the country and campaigning in state primaries.

And he repeated what he said before: If his name should be entered in some of the states' preferential primaries where it can be done without an individual's consent, "I will take whatever steps are necessary to remove my name."

Rockefeller, a three-term governor who won last in 1966, gave the impression that so far as he is concerned he has reached the end of his political road and is glad to have it that way.

He says he has a sense of fulfillment now and has no inner drive to get into another presidential contest.

BUT WHEN ASKED what he would do if the Republicans wanted to draft him, he was very evasive, saying: "I'm not convinced these things happen."

This can be put into simple English another way: While he says he won't try for the nomination, he won't pass it up if he can get it without campaigning.

He is as aware as anyone else, of course, that he is frequently being mentioned as a likely prospect at a time when no other Republican in sight looks like a sure shot for the nomination.

THIS ISN'T the first time Rockefeller has given the appearance of taking himself out of consideration.

On Dec. 26, 1959 he said he would not be a candidate for his party's nomination in 1960, a nomination which eventually went to the then-Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

He closed the door on himself that time, or so it seemed, after touring the country and finding Nixon was away out in front. Rockefeller said his decision was "definite and final."

But that isn't the way he thought by the late spring of 1960 as the nominating convention drew close, for then he announced he would be willing to be drafted. That never became a problem for him, since Nixon had the nomination cinched.

ROCKEFELLER SWITCHED tactics in 1964, when the field was as wide open as it is now. He campaigned for the nomination that year. In fact, he announced his candidacy before anyone else.

But he locked horns with Barry Goldwater who had the nomination far more sewed up then the governor imagined. But, like Nixon before him, Goldwater lost the election.

While Rockefeller gives the impression of being totally satisfied with just being governor, the fact that he won his third term race in 1966 is probably vitally important to him if he still has hopes for the presidency. It's a launching pad. If he had lost the election, he would be politically finished.

Team Of Impartial Observers Good Idea For U.S. Elections

By WHITNEY M. YOUNG, JR.

I recently returned from a trip to Vietnam as a member of the presidential commission to observe the elections there. There were 22 of us — senators, governors and businessmen, civic leaders, heads of veterans group's churchmen and publishers. Our job was simply to observe the elections, not to make judgments on the war.

The balloting seemed fair to me, and it was carried out under great handicaps — a largely illiterate population, war conditions, and Viet Cong terrorism. I think our presence helped insure an honest election, and I think that the idea of a team of observers has application here at home.

A team of independent observers for example, could help insure fair elections in parts of the U.S. where Negro citizens are either openly prevented from voting or covertly intimidated into casting their ballots for local bosses. While I was abroad, Mississippi held its primary elections, and I wish a team of observers had been present there.

IN SOME COUNTIES with clear Negro majorities, Negro candidates lost to white incumbent sheriffs and mayors. While many Negroes would vote for candidates of the white power structure for various reasons, such a clean sweep looks suspicious. Fraud has already been charged. I have little doubt that intimidation was a factor. Few people are strong enough to campaign and vote for candidates when their jobs may be endangered or their families threatened.

Here is an example of a situation where independent observers could perform a service. If we are willing to foster democracy 8,000 miles from home, we should take similar steps in parts of our own nation which have little experience with democarcy.

ALTHOUGH MUCH of my time in Vietnam was taken up with observer duties, I spent as much time as I could with the most dynamic, articulate and dedicated group of Americans to be found anywhere in the world — the Negro GI's who are serving there far out of proportion to their numbers.

One soldier told me that the war he was fighting in Vietnam was only one of America's wars. "The other war," he said, "is the one against poverty and racism at home. I wouldn't mind being out here if I knew that my family in the States was getting a fair break, but those guys in congress wouldn't even pass a bill against rats."

Passage Of Time Eroding De Gaulle's Great Stature?

IN AFRICA—Charles de Gaulle cut quite a different figure when he made a speech in Algiers on Armistice Day in 1943. He then was president of the French Committee of National Liberation.

Magic Aura Fading Around Cross Of Lorraine's Bearer

By GEORGE SIBERA

PARIS (UPI) — Age and changing times have combined to reduce the once towering stature of Charles de Gaulle.

Frenchmen continue to live and work in the tall shadow of de Gaulle 27 years after—as the inspired and inspiring leader of free France—he raised the cross of Lorraine over the prostrate body of his Nazi-defeated nation.

As President of France, de Gaulle still is the nation's dominant, and most dominating figure. But today, nine years after he returned to power to save France from a threatened cival war, the de Gaulle aura glows less.

Abroad, among allies such as Britain and the United States, he is mistrusted by officials and castigated by public opinion as a rude, overbearing, would-be strong man. At home, political opposition is increasingly outspoken.

For the first time since he burst onto the world scene with his no-surrender appeal to Frenchmen on June 18, 1949 as the founder of the Free French movement, there are indications that Gaullism and the nearly 77-year-old de Gaulle himself are falling prey to nature's inevitable laws of age and change.

Much of the magic seems to have worn off the old master's granite-like figure. French newspapers gravely discuss Gaullism in the past tense. They are busily sizing up the chances of the growing pack of would-be heirs.

Knowledgeable diplomats in Paris say they can hear rumblings of a new France to come—a France with de Gaulle off the stage forever.

The questions being insistently asked in embassy chanceries are: Has France already moved into a transition period heralding the demise of Gaullism? Will the final changeover be smooth or will France have to go again through one of her frequent agonies before begetting a new government?

Many bluntly say France without de Gaulle will be a better France. All agree it will be a changed France.

Already a political storm is blowing in France and is likely to burst full out soon after the national assembly reconvenes Oct. 2.

Opposition deputies will assail the president for his "vive Quebec libre" cry during his Canadian visit in the summer which seriously damaged French-Canadian relations and has been bitterly criticized by the opposition at home.

The opposition still is seething over his insistence that his government be given decree powers to push through its economic and social program.

De Gaulle's former finance minister Valery Giscard D'Estaing is threatening to withdraw the support of his 44 National Assembly deputies from the Gaullist coalition unless the president relaxes his one-man rule.

Both big business and labor unions deeply resent a personal project of de Gaulle's—a law obligating all firms with more than 1,000 employees to share profit with them.

Both labor unions and farmers plan anti-government protest demonstrations this fall.

De Gaulle's confidants say the president is fully aware of the irrevocable march of time. They say the old general is worried that the individualistic streaks of Frenchmen's natures —even Caesar spoke of the Gallic people as a fickle, volatile populace—may prove stronger than his ceaseless appeals for unity.

Haunted by the memory of days past, when France was being mocked as a country divided into 40 million Frenchmen, de Gaulle went on nationwide television Aug. 10 with an appeal designed to conjure up the ghost of past internecine divisions.

As is true of almost everything he says these days, it created bitter comment in much of the press, a so-what response in the rest.

In fact, both France and the world at large have been shocked in recent months by de Gaulle statements which have been condemned by some as monumental blunders, by others as deliberate affronts.

In addition to his "vive Quebec libre" remark—repeated and reemphasized after he returned home to France—there also was his condemnation of Israel as an alleged "aggressor" in the Israeli-Arab war, and his abrupt shutting off of all arms deliveries to Israel.

De Gaulle's military walkout from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and expulsion of all U.S. and other Allied forces from France also were bitterly resented, not only among his allies but among many Frenchmen, too.

IN CANADA — This is how French President Charles de Gaulle appeared last July 23 in Montreal, Quebec. He has been severely criticized for his remarks for liberating Quebec. (AP Wirephotos)

NEW STATE PARKS CHIEF

Showplace Reservoir To Become One Of Mott's First Projects

By EDWIN S. CAPPS

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — William Penn Mott Jr., may have made more changes in his eight months as director of the State Department of Parks and Recreation than have been made for the last 20 years.

The most noticeable change — and perhaps not the most popular — was a general increase in use fees at the state parks.

But such increases, which now are designed to collect from the users about 50 per cent of the cost of operation and maintenance, is indicative of Mott's approach to the parks and recreation business. It apparently is supported by the administration of Gov. Ronald Reagan.

The first reflection of Mott's ideas on development will come at Oroville Reservoir, part of the state water project. Mott's department has thrown out many of the plans for the park development at Oroville which had been set up by the previous administration.

The change will be a closely coordinated development on one area of the reservoir, complete with considerable private operation of facilities.

"We want to make all the dollars count in this development," Mott said. "We'll let private developers do what we don't have the money for. And we won't have the thing spread out too far with not enough funds to take care of all of it or to develop it properly."

The Oroville development will include launching ramps at the Oroville Dam, scheduled for completion this fall. These ramps will operate at the minimum level of the reservoir. Other ramps are planned at Kelly Ridge and Loafer Creek but they would not be operative at a minimum level. The reservoir will fluctuate about 187 feet between minimum and maximum depths.

The state will operate the launching ramps, a day use area at Loafer Creek, including picnic sites and a beach, and later will develop 150 camp sites. Sanitary facilities and parking also will be provided.

The private development will include lodges, up to 150 cabins, a marina, several stores and restaurants, and parking. The state will control the design of all the private development and will lease them on a long term basis for a percentage of the gross profit. After so many years, all of the priavtely built facilities will become the property of the state.

One of Mott's novel ideas at Oroville will be to provide a lot of green turf to make the reservoir area more picturesque. The terrain around Oroville, like most foothill country of 1,000 feet, gets very dry, brown and dusty in the summer.

"I've never understood why the land around a reservoir has to be so unattractive," Mott said. "After all, there's plenty of water.

"We plan to use a rainbird irrigation system and keep it green," he said. "In other words, we hope to keep the area surrounding the reservoir looking like it's springtime all the year. And it's a beautiful area in the spring."

WILLIAM PENN MOTT JR.
Making dollars count

Naturally, because of the heavy fluctuation of the reservoir, there will have to be a bare exposed bank for many feet during periods of low water.

"But we hope the green grass surrounding the reservoir will make people forget about the ugly exposed bank," Mott said. "Instead of a dried up area, we hope to give a meadowy effect."

Another feature in the coordination will be a trackless train which will travel through the recreation area. It also will visit the dam and powerhouses so the visitors will understand what makes the whole project tick.

In other changes, Oct. 1 will find at least a temporary lifting of a 20-year ban against keeping dogs overnight in state parks. Mott held hearings several months ago to determine public reaction to the change. Governor Reagan had suggested a change in the dog-ban in his policy statement for an action program for parks.

On next Jan. 1, Mott plans to institute a program for reservations for camping sites in state parks, another brand new concept. Camp sites in parks now operate on a first come, first served basis, and many people have to be turned away on peak weekends. The only park in the system with reservations at present is the Hearst Castle at San Simeon.

Mott said the reservation period — when they're accepted — will be from Jan. 1 through June 30. People wishing to stay in the parks later in the summer or fall will have to make reservations before June 30.

Another innovation in the park system had its beginning just on Sept. 9, when the first public visitors were admitted to the governor's mansion in Sacramento. The mansion had been vacated by Reagan and his family in April, in favor of a private residence which they rent for $1,000 per month.

"On the first day, there were 350 people went through the mansion on tours," Mott said. "On Sunday, it was 400. And that's about all we can handle through there on a single day."

Charge for the tours is 25 cents for adults, which will not come close to paying the cost of operating the tours. However, it was felt that any higher fee might be interpreted as an attempt to discourage use and the maintenance of the old mansion. The tours will be continued through next June, at which time it will be determined if a permanent plan should be developed.

If you drink three cups of coffee a day, you spend about as much each year as some South American coffee workers earn annually.

The average Latin American peasant earns approximately $150 a year — a little less than what you'd pay for three daily 15-cent cups of coffee during that period.

Rural workers in many South American countries struggle with uneven land distribution, a shortage of developed land, vast numbers of sharecroppers, landless tenant farmers, and farms too small to support the families working them. Poor conditions like these spell low agricultural yields — dangerous for a region in which agriculture is the main way of life. And rural unrest undoubtedly helps the Castro-style guerillas operating in Bolivia, Venezuela, Colombia, Guatemala, Haiti, and Peru.

The last few years have seen considerable improvement in many South American agricultural problems. Almost every country now has some kind of land reform.

Venezuela has distributed land to about 115,000 families; Bolivia has eliminated most of its enormous semi-feudal estates. Peru, Colombia, and Ecuador have given property rights to many landless workers, and Chile's president last month signed into law one of the most ambitious reform programs on the continent. In Colombia, the Roman Catholic Church is lending vital support to the land redistribution program.

Latin American land problems comprise a number of ills, which demand a variety of solutions.

One kind of land reform is redistribution of public lands or large, idle estates — a program which has had fair success in Mexico, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, and Venezuela. Equalizing land holdings is vital in Latin America because almost every country is plagued with "too little or too much" distribution — land patterns in which holdings are either too large or too small to be farmed efficiently.

Estate owners, who can live comfortably on revenues from a fraction of their holdings, have little incentive to plant their idle lands. Farmers whose acres are just barely enough for subsistence can't afford machinery to improve their yields.

But the Inter-American Development Bank reports that land redistribution was the slowest-moving agrarian reform in 1966 — partly due to problems in expropriation. Only Cuba has confiscated large holdings without payment. All other countries offer compensation.

But some Latin American legislatures, many dominated by landowners, require their governments to pay cash for confiscated lands — an impossible demand for poor, underdeveloped states. Most successful land-reform programs allow the government to pay for land in long-term bonds.

Rural education has become another type of land reform in many countries. Local governments, private agencies, and foreign nations — including the U. S. A. — now train agricuitural specialists and broadcast radio programs to teach the farmers better methods.

Improving the peasant's condition also involves a third reform granting property rights. Giving land to tenants who have worked the landowner's property for a specified period of time is one way to eliminate semi-feudal conditions and indentured labor.

The Inter-American Development Bank says land titling has ress of any reform.

Other agrarian programs under way in Latin America include survey of lands, organization of rural cooperatives, and government loans to small farmers. A very limited amount of progress is being made in progressive taxation, which favors small, high-yield farms and discriminates against idle estates.

But a large number of agricultural ills remain uncured by the reforms of the past few years.

Several years ago, Pedro Beltran, Peru's former prime minister, proposed "agrarian reform" for his country. But some observers say his "noble ideal" was just a plan for moving the Peruvian Indians from the heavily populated valleys to barren, unoccupied land on the mountain slopes.

Even in Mexico, where reform began half a century ago, large estates still exist. Landowners get around the law by "dividing" their estates into many sections, registered in the name of different members of the landowner's family.

This Week In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Around The World, Around The Clock:

As American planes dropped blockbuster bombs in Vietnam during the week, the repercussions rocked Washington.

The director and three other top officials of a volunteer agency working with Vietnamese civilians resigned in protest against the war. Fifty other members of the International Voluntary Services, financed by U. S. aid funds, sent a letter to President Johnson in which they called the war "an overwhelming atrocity."

"We have seen enough to say that the only monuments to this war will be the dead, the maimed, the despairing and the forlorn," the letter said. The organization has 170 volunteers working at low pay with the South Vietnamese as teachers, agriculture advisers and social workers.

The Administration maintained an official silence on the resignations. But sources said Johnson and top administration officials are fully aware of the civilian suffering that prompted the volunteers to pull out.

Administration leaders believe the devastation and death is part of the price that must be paid to avoid wider suffering should the Communist-led forces win.

On the war front, U. S. planes dropped bombs on a key bridge six miles from Communist China and knocked out Haiphong's last bridge to the south. North Vietnamese forces kept heavy pressure on U. S. Marines with artillery and infantry assaults.

San Francisco: Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara announced that a limited force of antimissile missiles would be deployed around the United States to defend the country. McNamara said it would take about five years to have the force fully deployed and cost about $5 billion.

United Nations: The United Nations General Assembly elected Corneliu Manescu, Romanian foreign minister, as president at the opening of its 22nd session. He is the Assembly's first president from a Communist nation.

Corpus Christi, Tex.: Hurricane Beulah, with reported winds of 175 miles an hour, swept over Texas and Mexico. By the time Beulah died, its property damage toll had reached almost half a billion dollars. At least 35 deaths were blamed on the hurricane.

Detroit: A two-week strike by Detroit's 11,500 public school teachers ended when teachers voted to accept a contract calling for a $1,700 pay increase during the two-year pact.

Stanford: Margaret Elizabeth Rusk, 18, daughter of Secretary of State Dean Rusk, married Guy Gibson Smith, 22, a Negro Army Reserve officer. Smith is working temporarily at a space research center before going on active duty as a helicopter pilot.

Boston: Bernard Goldfine, 76, Boston textile tycoon whose gifts to high government officials rocked Washington during the Eisenhower administration, died of a heart attack at his home.

Washington: The House voted to approve a $40 million rat control program that it had previously rejected.

OLD TIME RELIGION

'Bible Belt' Fading Away

By RICHARD GLASS
(First of a two-part series)

ATLANTA (UPI)—The "Bible Belt" that gave birth to "that old time religion" has faded with the dusty country roads on which the circuit riders once made their rounds.

Stretching from the lower Atlantic seaboard westward across the plains of Kansas, Texas and Oklahoma, the belt has been criss-crossed by interstate highways, invaded by industry and populated by former Yankees.

The face of the Roman Catholic Church, long a frightening image to a rural people more likely to be swayed by the Ku Klux Klan than Europe-born tradition, has taken on a neighborly look in the eyes of millions of natives of the region.

The term "Bible Belt" was popularized about 1925 by author H. L. Mencken to describe that section of the Southern United States wihch gave a literal interpretation to the hell, fire and brimstone passages of the Bible. It was the era of the Scopes "monkey trial," of revival tents, and strong suspicions the automobile was a passing fancy.

There are still areas in the region where the approach to religion has remained about the same during the past 30 or 40 years, but these are more accurately described as pockets, rather than a belt.

The trend toward liberalism, or "openness" as many clergymen prefer to call it, is widespread. Even the Dixie-rooted Southern Baptist Convention, the largest Protestant denomination in the country, has begun to emphasize social action as well as its traditional concern for the salvation of the individual soul.

Young men and women from the farms have gone to college and met members of other faiths, had their horizons enlarged by study, taken jobs in the city and settled in suburbs connected to churches by pavement, not dusty roads.

Scores of thousands of families have moved South with industry, in skilled or managerial jobs, bringing their own faiths and adopting, but changing, the churches of their areas. The migration reverses and contrasts with that of rural Negroes of the South who go north into slums to join swelling welfare rolls.

United Press International reporters learned the facts of change in scores of interviews with laymen and clergymen of all faiths throughout the region.

"Things are looser," said one Baptist layman, "and more comfortable. Let's say we're no longer cinched in by the belt, but braced and suspended by church life more proper to our times."

Dr. Marshall W. Dendy of Richmond, Va., moderator of the southern branch of the Presbyterian Church, believes "There is an increasing awareness of the need to make the church responsive to the needs of society. We are more ecumenical than we have been. To put it bluntly, I think denomination will be less important in the future."

Methodist Minister Gordon Goodgame of Knoxville Tenn., takes the view, "There's less interest in saving the soul for some future time and more concern for the present time and the whole person."

But fundamentalism still has strong proponents. In every denomination many individuals believe in the Bible as the only literal word of God, and seek to follow its lessons and injunctions to the letter.

This group, however, is hard-put to hold its ground, as was demonstrated in recent months in Tennessee, heart of the old Bible Belt where liquor and theories contrary to the literal word were totally taboo.

The Tennessee legislature repealed, with only minor difficulty, the state law against teaching Darwin's theory of evolution, the issue which caused the Scopes trial in 1925, and then followed up by giving communities the right to conduct local option votes on liquor sales.

North Carolina's legislature, stunned by a state supreme court ruling that liquor purchased from state-owned stores could be consumed only in the home, hastened to pass a "brown-bag" law to continue the practice of taking bottles to clubs or restaurants. South Carolina did the same a few weeks later.

The most significant vote on the liquor question in the Bible Belt in recent times came in 1966 when Mississippi, the last prohibition state, decided to go wet after 58 years of drought, much of it artificial since liquor was readily available and the state collected a tax on the "illegal" beverage.

Within a year 42 of Mississippi's 84 counties had voted for legal sales, a greater proportion than in any other local option state.

CANTERBURY VISITS GRACE CATHEDRAL

Dr. Arthur Michael Ramsey, Archbishop of Canterbury, preaches at a special community ecumenical service in San Francisco's Grace Cathedral. At upper left is Bishop C. Kilmer Myer, Episcopal Bishop of California. The service Wednesday night marked a brief appearance of the Anglican churchman in the Bay Area. This weekend he will address the Episcopal convention in Seattle. The eye-catching picture was made through the ornamental railing of the cathedral. (AP Wirephoto)

Religion Is Surviving Despite Communism

MOSCOW (AP) — Religious belief persists in the Soviet Union in surprising strength despite 50 years of Communist power.

In a recent survey in the large city of Kazan — the first of its kind known to have been made — 21 per cent of the adults questioned said they believe in God. Another survey in a typical collective farm area showed that 57 per cent of the families had religious shrines in their homes.

The actual number of believers is probably larger than these figures indicate, since refusal to avow official atheism has social and career disadvantages.

Soviet authorities have expressed concern about the persistence of religion. Pravda, the voice of the Communist Party, earlier this year called for an increased stsruggle against "religious survival." It said this caused "damage to our society" and called for more education in atheism for all age groups.

There is recent evidence that new and more subtle methods will be used since the old crude antireligious propaganda has not worked so well.

Komsomolskaya Pravda, the newspaper of the Young Communist League, unexpectedly printed a letter recently advocating belief in God. This was accompanied by arguments in favor of atheism.

But a polite and rational tone was maintained throughout.

The paper, which is read by millions of young people, apparently was trying to get through to those seriously considering the basic problems of life and death. It was not just dismissing the argument for religion as ridiculous.

OUTDOOR SUMMER RITES EXPERIMENT—A SUCCESS

DALLAS (UPI) — Pastor Neal T. Jones moved his Shiloh Terrace Church services to the outdoors for the summer and reported the arrangement had astonishing results.

Sunday evening worship services were held on two baseball diamonds in June, July, and August. Attendance rose 30 per cent, Jones said.

"The outdoor services caused our people to focus attention on those outside of the church rather than themselves," Jones said.

His closing summer message was "Putting God in a Box."

"One of the toys that has survived for generations is the Jack-in-the-box," he said. You crank out a little tune and Jack pops his head out and everybody gets a laugh. But after you have done it two or three times you grow tired of it. You push him on the head and place him back into his box. You clamp the lid on it and place the box on a shelf where it stays until you want another laugh.

"This is what people are doing today with God. This is why we moved to the parks. We did not want to put God in a box."

The service will be held in the prison's Jewish chapel at 7 p.m. and will consist of excerpts from the regular five-and-one-half-hour service.

Included will be the sounds of the traditional Shofar, or rams horn, which all Jews are commanded to hear.

Hari-Kari At Kentfield As Marin Tars Lose Opener

By KIMO CAMPBELL

College of Marin Tars committed football hara-kiri last night, bowing to San Jose City College 29-14 in a second-half deluge of interceptions, penalties, fumbles and missed opportunities at Kentfield.

The Mariners played a good football team—make no mistake about it—and they played well themselves in the second quarter, but they put themselves into a series of holes only the Green Bay Packers could escape. Six pass interceptions, as many fumbles, (two of them lost) and 110 yards in penalties, most of them at crucial times, hurt the Tars more than the speedy Jaguars did. Barely.

Marin coach Dick Read was understandably upset by his team's poor second-half showing. He gave credit to San Jose as a "fine team, but we beat ourselves more than they beat us. Crucial penalties, missed passes—(Honor) Jackson was always open and we never hit him . . . pass defense . . . we just played stupid football in that second half. I don't know what else I can say, except that I'm still pleased with the boys we've got and I think we'll be ready for our conference."

Outstanding players for Marin were end Bill McClelland, linebackers Bill Hickerson and Jim Crisp and back Karl Stein on defense, and backs Dean Lazzarini, Don Smith and Tim Harr on offense, as well as Jackson, who WAS open a lot.

San Jose scored the second time it got the ball, with quarterback Dave Ellis throwing to streaking flanker Tom Davis for 22 yards, then flipping a sideline pitch to end Pat Pritchard for 8 yards and a TD. The kick was blocked with 6:17 left in the first period.

The next time they got the ball, it was Ellis-to- Davis again, with the swift Davis, a superb receiver, gliding for 27 yards before cornerman Brian Whitney brought him down. The Tars held at their seven, but Sam Caruthers came in and booted a 24-yard field goal to up the count to 9-0 with 39 seconds left in the quarter.

The Mariners struck back with shocking suddenness. After Harr hustled the kickoff back 30 yards to the Tar 44, speed merchant Lazzarini whipped around end and jet-streaked 56 untouched yards for the score.

Marin got on the board again for a 14-9 lead when Stein flagged down an errant Ellis pass and cruised 31 yards with it. Bill Ingram passed to Len Pieri, who made a fine leaping catch for the last 15 yards. Ingram kept the ball and plunged into the corner of the end zone for the two-point conversion.

But the Tars' lead vanished as quickly as it had come, as the incredible Davis made another big catch for 23 yards, one of three completed passes in the Jags' drive. Power-running fullback Ken Blackwell smashed over from the four, and the missed conversion left the visitors on top by one at halftime, 15-14.

The third quarter was a series of penalties and thwarted drives, but San Jose put on the pressure at the start of the last period by intercepting a Mariner aerial and grinding out the score on the ground, content to use up time rather than send Ellis to the air. Blackwell scored again from the two, with 14:57 left to play.

The coup de grace came after Marin punted and San Jose took over on its 45. Halfback Brad Meadors set sail around left end and almost duplicated Lazzarini's run, coming just a yard shy—but getting his touchdown. That, folks, was all she wrote.

It's A Clean Sweep For Marin Prep Gridders

Giants Failed To Hit In Clutch This Year

It seems incredible that the Giants could have left 155 runners stranded on third base this season with one or none out. Yet, Art Santo Domingo has the figures to prove it. Santo Domingo is the club statistician and a good one. He isn't afraid to compile negative as well as positive sets of figures.

Statisticians of other clubs concentrate on favorable figures, overlooking the negative stuff, such as errors, the number of times a batter grounds into a double play and leaves runners stranded in scoring position.

Santo Domingo's compilation of 155 Giants left stranded on third with less than two out covers only 150 games. By the time the Giants play out their 1967 string of 162 games, the total of LOBs at third may reasonably be expected to increase.

Nothing Confusing About It

Statistics, without specifics, sometimes are misleading. But there's nothing confusing about the startling total of stranded men left on third this year by the Giants. It summarizes a frustrating season of good pitching that was nullified by bad clutch hitting.

Not all of the Giants failed at bat in the clutch. Jim Davenport performed heroically on several occasions. Jack Hiatt won a couple of games with clutch hits, one of them his first major league grand slam homer.

However, when a ball club leaves an average of one man stranded on third base in each game with less than two outs, it surely cannot be classified as a clutch hitting outfit.

There were isolated instances wherein the club did redeem early inning failures to score men on third. That recent game in Chicago where Mike McCormick won his 20th game was an example.

But that game started like so many others. An opening ground rule double put Ty Cline on second. Tom Haller moved him to third on a right side roller. Cline never scored as Willie Mays and Willie McCovey popped out.

In the fifth inning Bob Schroder led off with a double. Hal Lanier advanced him to third on a right side roller. The next two men struck out.

Exception To General Rule

In the sixth inning Haller drew a leadoff walk. McCovey singled him to third with one out. Haller never scored.

So McCormick was trailing 2-1 on a four hitter as the Giants went to bat in the ninth. Davenport and Hiatt got the clutch pinch hits in a five-run rally that made McCormick a 6-2 winner.

However, that game was an exception to the general rule of 1967 for the Giants. They didn't score men on third base this season with one or none out.

Tamites Crush Salesian

The Marin Chamber of Commerce will never get a testimonial from Richmond's Salesian High School.

Novato's Hornets were inhospitable last weekend, beating the East Bay football team 20-6, but Tamalpais' charged-up Indians were downright hostile as they ran up an impressive 27-6 triumph at Tam yesterday afternoon.

Coach Willie Hector's Redmen rambled for good yardage on the ground, with Mike Fowler and Ron Blasingame tearing the Chieftan's line almost at will, and gobbled up more acreage via the airways, as quarterback Don Mackin threw exquisitely timed passes, mostly to end Luther Barrow. Mackin rang up 10 completions in 15 tries, 5 of them to the grabby Barrow.

Meanwhile, the Tam defense, meek a week before, started hitting early and kept the pressure on Salesian. Tam had such good field position, due to fine ball control and good defense, that it only had to punt once. Linemen Bruce Hildreth, Verdean Herbold, Mike Locati and Bob Chivers stood out on defense, as did Barrow and Luther Brown in the secondary.

Coach Hector was elated by his club's improved showing over last week's 19-7 loss to Riordan, happy with the offense, though the defense is still unsettled. "We've been trying to find out who can do what, so we haven't put in our stunts or special defenses yet," he said. "When we put in the stunts and quit playing man-to-man, the defense will pick up. They hit better today, both blocking and tackling."

Next week Tam travels to scenic Monterey for the last pre-season contest before opening its Marin County Athletic League schedule against Novato Oct. 7.

EARLY SCORING

The Indians made their point early yesterday. Barrow stormed 47 yards with the opening kickoff, and with Brown, Blasingame, and Fowler pounding out yardage on the ground, Tam went over in 10 plays, Blasingame packing it in from the one.

After two Salesian drives got nowhere, it was Fowler's turn to score. Mike carried around the left side for four yards and six points after a 48-yard march in 13 plays. Blasingame's run made it 13-0 in the second quarter.

THREAT FAILS

Salesian got on the board after the kickoff, Don Miller scoring from the four. The kick for point was no good. But the ensuing kickoff almost was. Fowler bobbled a short kick, and Salesian recovered. Two first downs later, the Chieftans were on Tam's 5 with 29 seconds left in the half, only to lose their chance when Herbold pounced on a fumble.

Deciding to open up some daylight in the third period, Mackin moved his club 56 yards to another score, pitching to Barrow over the middle for 23 and then sending Fowler on a streak around left end for 13 and a TD. Blasingame's run made it 20-6 with 5:52 left in the quarter.

Another Tam drive was stopped by an interception, but Salesian fumbled it right back,

Terra Lindans Nip Poly, 14-7

By GARY TISCHLER

Like French maids, money and lawyers, a solid defense is a handy thing to have around.

Especially when your offense is acting like a schoolboy, out on his first date, all bumbling and sputtering and getting nowhere.

Terra Linda High School's defense, by now something of a shining football trademark, stayed true to form last night, belting a surprisingly determined bunch from Poly of San Francisco, 14-7, with the help of a couple of breaks cashed in for gold, at San Rafael High School field.

Terra Linda coach Don Lucas was not exactly grinning from ear to ear about the hard-earned payoff.

"We weren't too sharp on offense," he said. "Our passing game was 'way off. I guess maybe it was a little hard to get up after winning like that (32-7) against Santa Rosa last week."

Lucas had nothing but praise for his defense.

"They did a great job," he said. "That Larsen (Dane) was fantastic."

WRECKING JOB

Outside linebacker Larsen, middle linebacker Rod Powell and all-league defensive end Bruce Kilby in general did a wrecking job on Poly's offense. They made the Parrots croak for most of the night, causing them 42 lengths of lost yardage and forcing quarterback Ken Worthington into a 2 for 7 night, including two interceptions.

Worthington looked as if he could do better, given more than five seconds.

Terra Linda quarterback Dave Edson was not exactly passing anybody on their ears. He completed 3 of 12, one of them a nifty little job to Keith Stirling that went for 45 yards, the night's longest play from scrimmage, in the first period.

BIG BREAKS

All three touchdowns of the night came from rougly a yard out, and were set up by breaks.

The Trojans scored their first after Art Stackhouse recovered a fumble on the Poly 40-yard line in the second period. They scored in eight plays with Stirling finally barging over.

Terra Linda missed another good chance with a first and goal from the six in the second period but couldn't crack it in.

Poly finally got on the scoreboard after a pass interception set up the Parrots on the Trojan 34-line. They worked down to the one from where Chris Jordan took it in by half a nose and despite a crisp, helmet-shaking tackle by Kilby.

Just when time and momentum seemed to be running out for the Trojans, they got the break of the night when the Par-

Oh, That Giant Pitching!

Orlando Cepeda of the St. Louis Cardinals may be the most valuable player in the National League, but the San Francisco Giants still think they made a good trade when they sent the big slugger away.

The Giants got lefty Ray Sadecki for Cepeda and Sadecki made the deal look good again last night as he pitched a four-hit shutout to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 1-0 at Candlestick Park.

The win was the 10th of the season for Sadecki, who didn't get a chance to start a game until June 25. He now has won four in a row and has reduced his earned run average to 2.96.

"I had my stuff and my control," Sadecki said in the clubhouse. "When I have both, I'm hard to beat."

"He had confidence too," chipped in catcher Tom Haller, who ended the game with a long homer to lead off the ninth inning.

Haller did not think it was Sadecki's best game, but he felt Ray's confidence was what made him a winner.

"He's not afraid to throw his pitches like he was last season," Haller said.

BRIGHT FUTURE

The win was the 14th in 18 games for the Giants this month and Sadecki's performance gave San Francisco a bright pitching future for 1968.

Sadecki, Juan Marichal, Gaylord Perry and Mike McCormick add up to as good a starting rotation as there is in the National League.

The Giants denied that Marichal would not be with the club next season. A St. Louis newspaper printed a story that Juan would be traded, but Giants vice president Chub Feeney said it was not true. "Marichal is in our plans for 1968," Feeney said.

Marichal's comment was:

"I'm happy in San Francisco."

Sweet Revenge For Novato In Victory Over Petaluma

PETALUMA—Novato football coach Al Scott had waited a whole year for this game. In the end, it almost felt as if he had waited too long.

Scott and his Hornets may have had some vivid memories of a 27-7 pasting they received last year at the hands of the Petaluma Trojans.

They got some of that back last night in a tight 14-7 win here that could have been not so tight.

The Hornets had a 14-0 lead on a pair of short TD tosses by sure-pitching Russ Dillon. They were trying for another when an interception gave Petaluma somewhat of a break, on its own 40-yard line, from where the Trojans marched to a touchdown late in the game.

Still, it might have been somewhere around 30-7, had it not been for some bad-timing penalties.

Dillon had a 40-yard TD toss called back on a 15-yard penalty. A 45-yard screen pass also was waved back by a red flag and a 19-yard rollout run by Dillon went the way of all flags. All three plays were deep in Petaluma territory.

Flag-waving and all, Dillon, the junior boy with the magic arm, had a good night, hitting on 11 of 18 passes for a pair of TDs and 100 yards. Mike Ahern caught both of them, a seven-yarder in the first quarter and a four-yarder in the third period.

"Our defense was great," Scott said. "They really did the job when they had to."

Petaluma wasn't free of frustration either. The Trojans had the ball on the Novato one with a first down and couldn't score. They also failed to punch it across with a first and goal from the eight-yard line. And they fumbled the ball away five times.

That's almost neurotic.

THAT TORRID A.L. RACE

Tigers On Prowl Again

Remember Spahn and Sain and two days of rain? The Detroit Tigers, suddenly snarling again in the tight American League pennant race, have come up with a similar refrain—Mickey and Earl and one day without toil.

Mickey Lolich and Earl Wilson, the Tigers' southpaw and right-handed aces, respectively, pitched niftily last night as Detroit swept two games from Washington and moved to within one-half game of second-place Boston and one game of leading Minnesota.

Lolich hurled a four-hitter as the Tigers took the nightcap 4-0 after Wilson became the majors' first 22-game winner in an 8-3 victory in the opener.

In other A.L. games, Minnesota walloped the New York Yankees 8-2, Boston split a pair with Baltimore, the Orioles winning the first game 10-0 and the Red Sox the nightcap 10-3; Cleveland edged the Chicago White Sox 2-1 in 13 innings and Kansas City beat California 3-1.

Spahn, a lefty, and Sain, a right-hander, were the mainstays of the Boston Braves' pitching staff in 1948 when the two consistently worked without the usual three days of rest between starts. The Braves captured the National League pennant that year.

The Tigers' starting staff was reduced to three earlier this week when right-hander Denny McLain dislocated two toes in a freak accident. That left it up to Lolich, Wilson and Joe Sparma.

Detroit had the day off today and Sparma, 15-9, is scheduled to oppose the Senators tomorrow.

Ram Defense Convinces Vikings

By BOB MYERS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Coach Bud Grant of the Minnesota Vikings is quite willing to concede the Los Angeles Rams' front defensive four is most impressive, but he'd like to add that the Rams' great defense extends back through the secondary troops.

The new Vikings' coach so reflected today after Los Angeles had sunk his team 39-3 to remain unbeaten in two National Football League regular season games and eight for summer-fall play.

Los Angeles' defense accounted for two pass interceptions and two Viking fumbles, and the offense turned all four breaks into scores before 52,255 in Memorial Coliseum last night, night.

"Of course," said Rams' coach George Allen, "I'm very proud of our defense . . . we haven't allowed a touchdown in two league games."

The Ram-Viking game was a prelude to a busy weekend in the NFL.

The rest of the NFL schedule, and all the American Football League slate, is set for Sunday afternoon.

The NFL has Baltimore, 1-0, at Philadelphia, 1-0; New York, 1-0, at Dallas, 1-0; Chicago, 0-1, at Green Bay, 0-0-1; Cleveland, 0-1, at Detroit, 0-0-1; St. Louis, 0-1, at Pittsburgh, 1-0; Atlanta, 0-1, at San Francisco, 1-0, and Washington, 0-1 at New Orleans, 0-1.

The AFL offers Kansas City, 1-0, at Miami, 1-0; Boston, 0-3, at Buffalo, 1-1; New York, 0-1, at Denver, 1-2, and Houston, 1-1, at San Diego, 1-0.

The Vikings, who scored 21 points against the San Francisco 49ers last Sunday in a losing effort, rushed for exactly zero yards in the first half, and it wasn't until late in the third period that they crossed the 50-yard stripe.

Spurrier May Get Chance Vs. Atlanta

The San Francisco 49ers play the home opener of their 18th National Football League season tomorrow against the Atlanta Falcons at Kezar Stadium where they have played before 4,432,326 fans in 17 seasons past.

If you count four earlier seasons in the All-America conference, the Kezar crowds who have cheered and booed the 49ers exceed five million.

A crowd of around 30,000 is expected to turn out and see if the 49ers, jittery winners by 27-21 over Minnesota last week, can handle the Falcons as they did in their only other league meeting last year. The 49ers took that one in Atlanta 44-7.

The Falcons fell behind the Baltimore Colts 31-7 last week, then rolled for 24 points in the second half and only got nipped 38-31.

The 49ers rolled up a 27-0 margin over the Vikings at Minnesota only to see that melted down to a 27-21 triumph.

SPURRIER'S CHANCE?

It's an interesting possibility that tomorrow's game might give 49er fans a better look at rookie quarterback Steve Spurrier, obtained in a trade with Atlanta as the Falcons' draft choice.

A knee sprain suffered last week by George Mira will move up Spurrier as the relief man for the 49er veteran quarterback John Brodie.

On the pass-catching side, the 49er picture is a little brighter. Last week, split end Dave Parks was kept out of action by a muscle sprain.

Sonny Randle, an eight-year veteran obtained from the St. Louis Cardinals for a draft choice, was rushed into action last week against the Vikings—so fast that Brodie, while calling the plays, had to tell Randle what his assignment was.

Parks was expected to go tomorrow against the Falcons.

"But if worse comes to worse and Dave can't make it, it's sure a nice feeling to have Sonny available," beamed 49er end coach Billy Wilson.

Drake Faces Powerhouse; San Rafael Hosts 'Ghost'

Mighty Vallejo Tests Pirates At Kentfield

Drake High School's Pirates, fresh off an impressive 31-13 win over Petaluma last weekend, face a stern challenge tonight when they meet perennial North Bay League powerhouse Vallejo High in College of Marin Stadium. Kickoff is 8 o'clock.

Vallejo, unbeaten for the past two seasons, opened with a 33-13 win over El Cerrito last week. The Apaches are, according to Drake Coach Bob Franceschini, an old-fashioned team, depending on power football with few frills.

"They stick to the running game" said Francheschini. "They only throw once in a while to keep you honest."

With a big, rough line led by tackle Dick Osterkamp, a 6-foot-3, 240-pound behemoth, the well-named Apaches run right over you, with quarterbacks Mike Golovich and Mike Hedrick keeping or giving off to halfback Fred Manuel.

DEFENDING CHAMPS

Drake's defending Marin County Athletic League co-champs, which Franceschini has called "as good as last year," will get a good line on their ability tonight. The Buccaneers' tentative starting lineup will have big Don Stone at the controls, with swift Don Alvarado racing for Stone's long tosses from the flanker position. John Brown will play halfback, and John Vollenwieder fullback.

In the line, the Pirates will have Dan Hermsmeyer and Rich Street at tackles, Richard Harnesberger and Perry Hedin at guards, Ed Thompson and Mike Gaffney at ends, and Wayne Wunderlich at center.

Bulldogs Face Montgomery '11' Tonight

San Rafael High School's Bulldogs, hoping for more offensive power, will have an odd problem on defense as they face Montgomery of Santa Rosa at San Rafael High tonight at 8 o'clock.

They'll be facing a five-man backfield — four guys and a ghost. The ghost is that of Mel Gray, Montgomery jet-propelled running back of recent year, who will be doing his streaking for the University of Missouri frosh this fall, much to the relief of San Rafael Coach Bob Muster.

However, Muster's defense will have to cope with Gray's old sprint-relay teammate, Tom Stender, who was Montgomery's only consolation in last week's 26-0 rout at the hands of Encinal, gaining 102 yards in 18 rushes.

The Bulldogs' starting offense will have Dan Weiss at center, Kim Johnstone and Cliff Crawley at guards, Tim Ecke and Chris Klyse at the tackles, Charley Collins and Ken Johnston at ends, Frank Pandiani and Lary Nelson at halfbacks, Dick Loomis at full, and Herb Rowland at quarter.

San Rafael is looking for its first win of 1967, having lost a cliffhanger in the last 29 seconds to Canyon last weekend.

SPORTS SHORTS

Seven Tied In T'Bird Tournament

CLIFTON, N.J.—Billy Casper, golf's mechanical man, headed a seven-man tie for the second round lead in the $150,000 Thunderbird Classic after shooting a par 72 yesterday. Bunched at 141 with Casper were Australia's Bruce Crampton, South America's Harold Henning, Tommy Jacobs, Rocky Thompson, Bill Collins and Pat Schwab.

One stroke back at 142 were Arnold Palmer, Gary Player, Art Wall Jr., Bert Weaver and Terry Wilcox.

FOOTBALL

San Francisco 49ers announced yesterday they have activated Wayne Swinford, a 192-pounder from University of Georgia, as a receiver and member of special teams for tomorrow's game against the Atlanta Falcons.

Swinford has been with the 49ers for three years but recently was on the injured waiver list. Quarterback George Mira now is on that list and Swinford fills his vacancy.

The 49er special teams include such specialists as the punt return men.

HOCKEY

The California Seals signed George Swarbrick, a right winger who played for them in the Western League last year and scored 31 goals.

They also announced signing Mike Laughton, a draft-choice center who belonged to the Toronto Maple Leafs and played last year for Victoria in the Western League.

TENNIS

LOS ANGELES—Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., upset Australia's John Newcombe, the Wimbledon and U.S. champion, 6-2, 7-5, in the Pacific Southwest tournament.

BERKELEY — Jan Leschly, of Denmark, has been seeded No. 1 for foreign entries in men's singles and Charles Pasarell, of Puerto Rico No. 1 in the domestic list for the weeklong Pacific Coast International Championships opening tomorrow.

Rafael Osuna, of Mexico, who won the tournament in 1963 is seeded No. 3 in the foreign entry list. Other foreign entrants are Bob Hewitt, Ray Moore and Jackie Saul, of South Africa, Torbin Ulrich, of Denmark, Pancho Guzman, of Ecuador, and Peter Curtis, of Great Britain.

Billie Jean King, of Berkeley, is seeded No. 1 in women's singles, with Francoise Durr, of France, No. 2.

with Wilson and Lolich, 12-13, facing the Yankees in New York on Monday and Tuesday nights. Wednesday is another open date for the Tigers, who looked to be on their way out of the race after dropping two straight to the Senators earlier this week.

Catcher Bill Freehan was among the Tigers' batting stars last night. His bases-loaded single in the seventh inning of the second game broke a scoreless tie. He also contributed two hits in the opener. Wilson also had two safeties and drove in a run in the first game.

TOVAR SCORES

Cesar Tovar walloped two homers while Zoilo Versalles had a homer, a double and a single for the Twins. Minnesota battered Mel Stottlemyre for 10 hits and seven runs in six innings and rode the seven-hit pitching of Jim Kaat to victory.

The triumph was the sixth in a row for Kaat and lifted his record to 15-13. Both runs off him were unearned.

Boston took advantage of three Baltimore errors in scoring five runs in the fourth inning and overcoming a 2-0 deficit in the second game. The Red Sox pounded out 14 hits while Joe Foy, Ken Harrelson and George Scott each drove in two runs. Winning pitcher Jose Santiago collected two hits and scored three times.

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE
By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Trump Opening Lead Can Make Opponents Do Share Of Work

A trump opening lead is not a bad idea when the opponents have bid all four suits.

Dummy will surely be short in one of the side suits, and the trump lead will then reduce dummy's ruffing power.

Opening lead — ♠ 9

West's trump opening lead gave the defenders a chance.

With any other lead South would make the slam pretty easily by ruffing two hearts in dummy.

SOUTH GOOFS

South gave the defenders a further chance by mangling the play.

He won the first trick with dummy's ten of spades, discarded a heart on the ace of diamonds and ruffled a diamond.

South cashed the top hearts, ruffed a heart in dummy and ruffed another diamond in his hand.

When the king of diamonds failed to drop, South drew the rest of the trumps.

This left him with three clubs in each hand.

East kept the king of diamonds and two clubs, and South was down when the club finesse failed.

SHOULD MAKE CONTRACT

South would make the contract if he didn't work so hard on the diamonds.

He should win the first trump in his own hand, cash the top hearts, ruff a heart in dummy and ruff a low diamond in his own hand.

Declarer next draws trumps and gives up a heart, saving dummy's A-Q of diamonds and A-Q of clubs.

East must win the last heart and must then return a club or a diamond, giving dummy a free finesse in either case.

Dummy thus gets three of the last four tricks, and South's last trump takes the other trick.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:

♠ A K Q J 5 3
♥ A K 6 3
♦ None
♣ 10 7 5.

What do you day?

ANSWER: Bid one or two spades, depending on your temperatment.

Most experts would bid only one spade, but some prefer a forcing opening bid with a hand of such playing strength.

As it stands, the hand is a borderline case.

Change one of the small hearts to the jack, and it would be a clear-cut tow-bid.

Novato Board To Tell Office Site Reasons

A public hearing on the site selected for the Novato Unified School District administration building will be held at 8 p.m. Monday in the West Novato School by the school board.

The informal meeting was called when opposition arose to the board's selection of the three-and-a-half-acre site at Wilson Avenue and Vineyard Road, opposite the Sinaloa Junior High School.

The board selected the site at its July 6 meeting and made application for $89,000 in state funds to purchase it. These were approved at the Aug. 9 meeting of the State Allocating Board, said Asst. Supt. Eugene de Brecht. The district was given an extension of the 30-day period to file condemnations proceedings on the property or lose its allocation, De Brecht said. The extension is up Oct. 1, he said.

When the application was made, opposition arose through the city's downtown study committee. Real estate dealer Alfred Bellucci also has circulated a petition against the site and has obtained more than 100 signatures, he said.

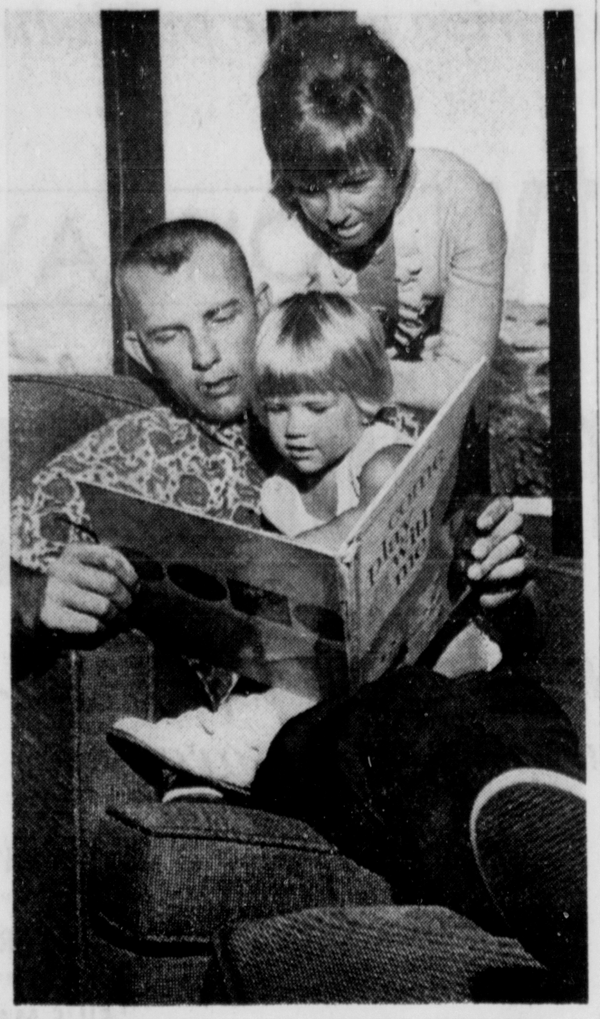
Much-Decorated Marinite Home From Vietnam With A Few Scars

By M. ELIZABETH JOHNSTON

A tour in Vietnam left scars on Lt. Harold K. Graves Jr., he appears to be coping with them quietly and optimistically. Before returning home Sept. 12, he was stationed with the 25th Infantry Division at Cu Chi, 20 miles northwest of Saigon.

Graves' quietly confident manner quickly gives one the feeling one could trust this young man with one's life or one's money, — a feeling that must have been reassuring to men in hhis platoon. And maybe one of the reasons for several medals he brought home.



FAMILY REUNITED — With a year of fighting in Vietnam behind him, Harold K. Graves Jr. relaxes at his parents' home on Strawberry Point, in a favorite off-duty occupation, reading to 2-year-old daughter Jennifer. His wife, Eileen, reads over Jennifer's shoulder. Lt. Graves is awaiting new orders, which he hopes will be close to Marin County.

IN STRAWBERRY

Lt. Graves, 26, his wife Eileen, 25, and their daughter, Jennifer, 2, are staying temporarily at his parents home, 10 Chapel Drive, Strawberry. His father, Harold K. Graves Sr. is president of the Golden Gate Baptist Seminary on Strawberry Point.

Lt. Graves was a platoon leader in A Company of the 27th Infantry Battalion until the end of "Operation Attleboro" last Nov. 30, one of the first big operations in the war zone center, according to Graves.

He won a Silver Star during that operation with the First Division when his company was sent on Nov. 5 to rescue another that had been cut off.

His was the lead platoon. It cleared a path by charging enemey bunkers, knocking out seven, and then fought their way out again. This allowed another company to come in and get out the stranded unit.

Between 15 and 20 snipers in trees were killed. Lt. Graves explained the Viet Cong often tie young teen-age boys in trees and give them rifles, for sniping. Left behind in one bunker, they found an old man and a young boy who had been shackled to gether, each with a rifle.

28-HOUR BATTLE

The battle lasted 28 hours. In it 220 VC were killed. U.S. losses were 43 killed and 85 evacuated wounded. Graves caught some sharpnel in the back, for which he received a Purple Heart.

Womack for several days. "We can't figure him," Graves said of the Viet Cong. He told of airborne infantry hunting for a missing soldier named Sandy Womack for several days. "w must have spent millions of dollars hunting for him." His companions had all been killed but the V.C. had taken Womack prisoner, later releasing him with some other GIs. Why he was the only one taken prisoner and why he was later suddenly released, they never learned.

Lt. Graves next took over a reconnaisance platoon until the end of "Operation Cedar Falls" last January. He then became an aide-de-camp for Brig. Gen. Edward M. Flanagan, assistant division commander of the 25th Division, then was an aide to Brig. Gen. Donnelly P. Batton of Area Defense Command.

CHIEF DUTY

His chief function as an aide, he said, was to keep the general informed of ground action while flying with him in a helicopter.

As a platoon leader in this air-conscious war, Graves not only went on ambush patrols but on "eagle flights," combat air assaults in which men are transported by helicopter from battle to battle.

Graves couldn't say enough about the"copters." "Compared to any other war, you can have anything you want brought in by helicpters today, and we did — weapons, hot food, cold beer, medicine — the list is endless."

Everybody has a base camp in Vietnam and today's camp is completely equipped with necessities and entertainment and sports eqipment, he said.

He also feels the equipment a GI has in this war is better and more plentiful than ever before. He found the controversial M-16 rifle "one of the finest rifles I've had. But it is a precision weapon and has to be taken care of."

He said that modern ammunition is lightweight and a GI can carry three times as much ammunition as in the past.

VIET MEDAL

Graves won the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with a Silver Star, for operation "Cedar Falls," during which not one of his platoon members was wounded or killed in five weeks of fighting. Over 2,000 V.C. were captured in the whole operation, as well as many weapons, pieces of equipment and intelligence documents, Graves said.

He received the Bronze Star for meritorious service for a year in Vietnam and an Air Medal with 10 oak-leaf clusters. Each cluster represents 50 hourss in the air.

He was awarded service medals by both the Vietnamese and U.S. governments and the National Defense Medal. His good conduct medal was one received when he was a sergeant at Fort Ord.

He was drafted in December, 1963, while working in a sporting goods store in Berkeley, and was sent to Fort Ord until July, 1965. He completed officer candidate school, then airborne (parachute jumping) and ranger schools at Fort Benning, Ga.

He was an instructor in the ranger school there, which prepares soldiers for hardships in combat, until he was sent to Vietnam. He will be getting out of the service in January, when his four years are up.

Just before he was drafted, he met his wife, Eileen, in Sausalito. While he was a private first class at Fort Ord they were married. During his Vietnam tour, she has been living in Millbrae with her parents.

Graves was born in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary grounds, Louisville, Ky., lived in Oklahoma 10 years before the family moved to Berkeley, where he contimued his schooling through high school.

He went to Oklahoma Baptist University one year, then studied a year at College of Marin. He hasn't decided whether to continue college. His ambition for the near future is "to get into the real estate business in Marin County."

Benefit Carnival

Congregation Kol Shofar of Santa Venetia will sponsor a carnival for its building fund from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Oct. 1 in a parking lot near the Emporium in the Northgate Shopping Center, Donald Altman, chairman of the congregation ways and means committee, announced.

VOLUNTEERS POISED

Marin Opens Bay Crusade Annual Campaign Monday

Volunteer workers throughout Marin on Monday will open a drive to collect funds for child aid organizations, hospitals, social service work, legal aid and other welfare groups supported by the United Bay Area Crusade.

There are 176 organizations in Marin, San Francisco, Contra Costa, Alameda and San Mateo counties to be supported by the $16,350,000 which is the goal of this year's drive.

Agencies in Marin are allocated funds according to needs shown in budgets submitted to the master agency. Groups helped by the crusade in Marin are Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Red Cross, Catholic Youth Organization, Young Men's Christian Association, Young Women's Christian Association, Sunny Hills, St. Vincent's School for Boys.

Others are Marin Jewish Community Center, Volunteer Bureau, Salvation Army, Catholic Social Service, Family Service Agency, Marin Association for Mental Health, Marin Aid to Retarded Children, Legal Aid Society, Marin council of the Bay Area Council of Social Planning.

Marinites also may benefit from similar agencies, hospitals and social aid centers in San Francisco and the Bay Area, crusade officials pointed out.

The campaign and administration throughout the year costs 10 cents of each dollar donated, crusade officials said.

The goal of $16,350,000 this year is a rise of 16.4 per cent over last year's $15,286,000 goal. Of last year's goal, $14,014,890 was raised.

The Marin campaign will be opened officially by a luncheon at 11:45 a.m. at Bob's of Marin restaurant, Corte Madera.

Meeting Canceled

The adjourned meeting of the Fairfax City Council scheduled for Oct. 2 has been canceled. The council was to have heard a presentation of architect's plans for the proposed city civic center.

No Competition For Fire Board

Four incumbent members of the Tamalpais Fire Protection District board were the only ones to file as candidates for four vacancies, by Monday's filing deadline, the board has been advised.

The four incumbents who filed are Carl H. Modell, John F. O'Connor, Charles W. Gilmore and Byron O. Boulware.

In the absence of opposition, the election scheduled for November will not be held and the district will ask the county board of supervisors to appoint the four men to their new terms.

The Prison Doc—

The Haberdasher Became Warden Of San Quentin

By DR. LEO L. STANLEY

JAMES A. JOHNSTON, center, came to San Quentin as warden as a young man in 1913 and compiled an outstanding record as a prison administrator. Later he held the same post at Alcatraz.

Like another of our illustrious citizens, Harry S. Truman, James Aloysius Johnston rose to political heights after starting his public career as a haberdasher.

Johnston had a small establishment in San Francisco. Because of his friendliness, his ability to please customers and his other good qualities, he became widely known and liked in his area.

He was civic-minded, being a charter member and organizer of the San Francisco Rotary Club.

He was politically-minded, too, having served as a San Francisco supervisor.

IT IS TOLD how Mrs. Hiram Johnson, wife of the governor of California, visited Johnston's store to buy her husband a new tie and was so nicely treated by the proprietor that she advised the governor to keep his eyes on that courteous and cordial young man. The governor did.

It was not long afterward that Governor Johnson made Johnston chairman of the California Board of Control, an agency that at that time really did control the finances of the state.

Later when trouble developed at Folsom Prison and it became necessary to replace an incumbent warden, the governor asked James Johnston to take over. He did, and soon brought tranquility out of chaos.

THEN, IN 1913, when a new warden was needed at San Quentin, young Johnston was asked to take over those duties. Again he accepted.

I remember very well his first visit to and inspection of that prison. I was just a youngster only a few months out of medical school and had spent only a short time with the institution's medical department. But I could see that we were kindred spirits.

We were both full of zeal and interest in our jobs. We had our whole lives before us, and our reputations to make. He recognized readily, as I did, the pressing need for improvements in every phase of prison administration and operations.

AS TIME WENT on, he gave unstinting, wholehearted support to the suggestions I made on how we might develop a fine medical department.

Johnston, like his predecessor John Hoyle, was hailed as a reform warden. And he did, with the stalwart support of Governor Johnson, noted for his governmental reforms, bring about changes that through the years have been of great benefit to all concerned.

It was during his early months at San Quentin that the wearing of striped uniforms was abolished.

WHAT A CHANGE it made in the appearance and the mental attitude of the inmates to doff the longitudinal black and white striped uniforms and don mail carrier blue!

Some outsiders had complained that beans were served too often to the inmates. Johnston ordered that the staple be served less frequently.

But there was such a protest from the prisoners over the restriction of one of their favorite foods that beans were restored to their prominence on the menu on a take-it-or-leave-it basis for the inmates.

JOHNSTON MADE other improvements in the food. He had a University of California professor survey the prison's culinary needs and recommend changes. Menus became more varied.

Johnston also abolished some of the forms of punishment that previous administrators had felt necessary to control the lawbreakers placed in their charge.

(I might say here that in all the years of my prison career, I never personally saw so-called corporal punishment administered.)

THE INMATES used to joke that Johnston abolished corporal punishment and "substituted" for it a new dental department.

He did, indeed, establish a dental program. In 1913 a dentist from San Rafael visited the prison each Sunday and spent two hours caring for the teeth of the some 2,000 prisoners. This, of course, was hopelessly inadequate.

Johnston firmly believed that a sound body was essential to a wholesome mind. He supported our efforts to see that the men who entered San Quentin often as physical wrecks left it far sounder in body. And one of his major advances was in the development of an efficient and adequate dental department.

JOHNSTON WAS A most kind and forgiving man.

In those days the warden, the captain of the yard and the doctor made up what was called "the little board" with the responsibility of reviewing the case histories of prisoners coming up for parole and making recommendations to the board of prison directors with whom the final decision rested.

In discussing cases I regarded as particularly exasperating I had no hesitancy in voicing my opinions. I remember one case in particular.

I STATED THAT the applicant was no good — that he had a bad prior record and had been in trouble frequently while in prison. I did not think he would ever make good. "He's a bad boy," I concluded.

The kindly warden winced. "No, I would not say he is a bad boy. I would prefer to say he is not a good boy."

Warden Johnston had the first automobile at San Quentin —

"Why Does My Dress Have An Offensive Odor?"

In manufacture today, most fabrics are given some treatment either to keep them from shrinking or stretching, or to resist spots, stains or wrinkles. Quite often these fabrics are treated with urea or melamine formaldehyde resin.

Usually this finish will not develop an objectionable odor, but occasionally one will eventually give off a strong fish-like scent. While the odor may not be detected immediately after manufacture, it may develop weeks or months later. Body heat or drycleaning temperatures, moisture from perspiration or steam will cause fabrics treated with such finishing agents to develop this offensive odor. Usually it cannot be removed.

When garments are affected in this manner, they should be returned to the manufacturer as the odor is caused by the method of manufacture.

By Robert and Ronald Casassa, Marin Cleaners, Inc.

Reform Warden Brought Changes To San Quentin

Kindly James Johnston Proved Himself An Able Administrator

a Model T Ford. But he could not drive it. Neither could Lew Terry, the official hostler.

LEW KNEW ALL about horses and he tried to master the machine. But he had no mechanical ability. A mile from the prison, at the railroad station in Greenbrae, he got stuck. A team of horses had to tow what he called "that infernal contraption" back to the barn at San Quentin.

Johnston solved his problem by making a Negro inmate of the prison named Knight, who had had previous experience with Model Ts, his driver.

Lew Terry went along as guard.

ONE DAY IN San Rafael, Knight violated a traffic regulation and was stopped by a police officer.

"Don't you know that I could throw you in jail for that?" the officer demanded.

Knight smiled broadly. "A little more time isn't going to bother me, officer. I'm doing life in San Quentin right now."

I owned San Quentin's second "horseless carriage," a bright red Velie that figured in one of the first escapes by automobile from San Quentin when four convicts "borrowed" it one dark and rainy day and drove past the guard who thought that I was at the steering wheel. The deception was soon discovered and the escapees captured.

MY ASSOCIATION with Warden Johnston was always pleasant, and I was sorry to see him displaced because of a change in state politics.

He devoted his time to lecturing and to finishing his book, "Prison Life Is Different," until he was named warden at Alcatraz, a difficult position he held for many years.

When, in 1946, there was a serious riot at Alcatraz in which one official was killed and several wounded, I was happy to respond to my old friend Warden Johnston's request that I come to "the Rock" while the battle was still raging to relieve his own doctors who had been on continuous duty for several days.

I CONSIDER James Aloysius Johnston to have been one of the best prison men developed in this country.

When he died some years ago, I was an honorary pall-bearer at his funeral.

Lives And Loves Of The Marlin

Tiburon Study Aims To Save Sports Fish

By M. ELIZABETH JOHNSTON

A research crew from the Tiburon Marine Laboratory is looking for those romantic areas of warm, Mexican waters where marlin and sailfish gather for "love-ins" during the spawning season.

Fish and wildlife experts hope information on the life and loves of these two of the world's most important big game species will help promote inter-government negotiations to cut down heavy commercial fishing. Otherwise marlin and sailfish may become "fished out."

The dwindling of the big fish in Lower California and Mexican waters has spurred the Tiburon laboratory on to survey for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Services their spawning habits and areas.

During the cruise in the waters between Cape San Lucas, Revilla Gegido Islands and the Mexican mainlands, samples were gathered from "tows."

The cruise recorded 50 plankton tows (made with a specially designed fine net), and 25 nekton tows (with an even finer net). Four times during the trip, samples were dipped up in nets under lights shining from the ship. These samplings are called "night light stations."

THE PLANKTON samples are being examined and separated now in Tiburon. They will later be sent to the Fish and Oceanographic Center, La Jolla, for further study and cataloging, to determine what fish families the plankton or larvae belong to, the time and area of their spawning, their growth rate, age, abundance and fertility.

Vials containing the ocean samples have been carefully marked as to the time, date, water depth and temperature of each capture.

Some of the creatures defy description. Some have nebulous, nightmarish shapes under the microscope. Some couldn't even be seen without a microscope, as they are smaller than the head of a pin.

DIRECTOR OF the Laboratory Gerald B. Talbot defines plankton as "organisms in the ocean at the mercy of currents, that can't control their own position." They provide food for small fish.

Some plankton stay the same size and shape. Others are larvae of immature fish. Some resemble long, thin, white shrimp with popping black eyes. Others have fish or crab shapes.

There are tiny, perfectly shaped crabs that measure only one-quarter inch across. Others are a full inch across. Both sizes grow plentifully in southern waters.

THESE TINY crabs go through several larvae forms, Talbot said. First, they look like baby spiders; then, like shrimps; then, they take on the crab shapes with long tails. Later, the tails fold under the crabs as they mature. They never grow any larger.

Sailfish eat quantities of these small crabs, according to Squire.

Until a few years ago, the marlin and sailfish, members of the eastern Pacific bill fish family, were in great abundance, not used by Mexican or American commercial fishermen.

BUT, ABOUT 10 years ago, Talbot said, foreign fishermen moved into waters off Mexico during tuna fishing operations and began catching marlin and sailfish. Japanese fishermen have been looking for new fishing grounds and Russian fishermen have also moved into the area from Baja California to the Equator.

Striped marlin is sought especially by Japanese fishermen. It brings a high price because it is particularly suitable for "sashini," a raw fish delicacy in great demand among the Japanese.

Sailfish are not considered to be good table fish. In Japan, they are ground up and made into a fish sausage, according to Talbot.

IN 1963, THE commercial catch of marlin by foreign fishermen in the eastern Pacific had increased to 1,267,000 fish, weighing 8,236 tons.

Talbot feels that "a thorough knowledge of the life history of these species will allow negotiations with foreign governments to protect and conserve them for maximum sustained yields. Otherwise, they will be overfished to such low abundance, they will have no value to either sport or commercial fishermen."

LABORATORY staff members assisting in this project include Howard O. Ness, Lloyd D. Richards and Daniel Eilers. The Mexican Department of Fisheries is also cooperating in the survey.

A Try To Save The Marlin

director of the Mexican Biological Laboratory, accompanied the research party. William O. Leet and Chris Psaropulos of the Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission of La Jolla, also assisted.

The Tiburon Marine Laboratory, with the help of sport fishermen, has also instituted a tagging program for marlin and sailfish. For the past three years, fish caught by sport fishermen have been tagged and released.

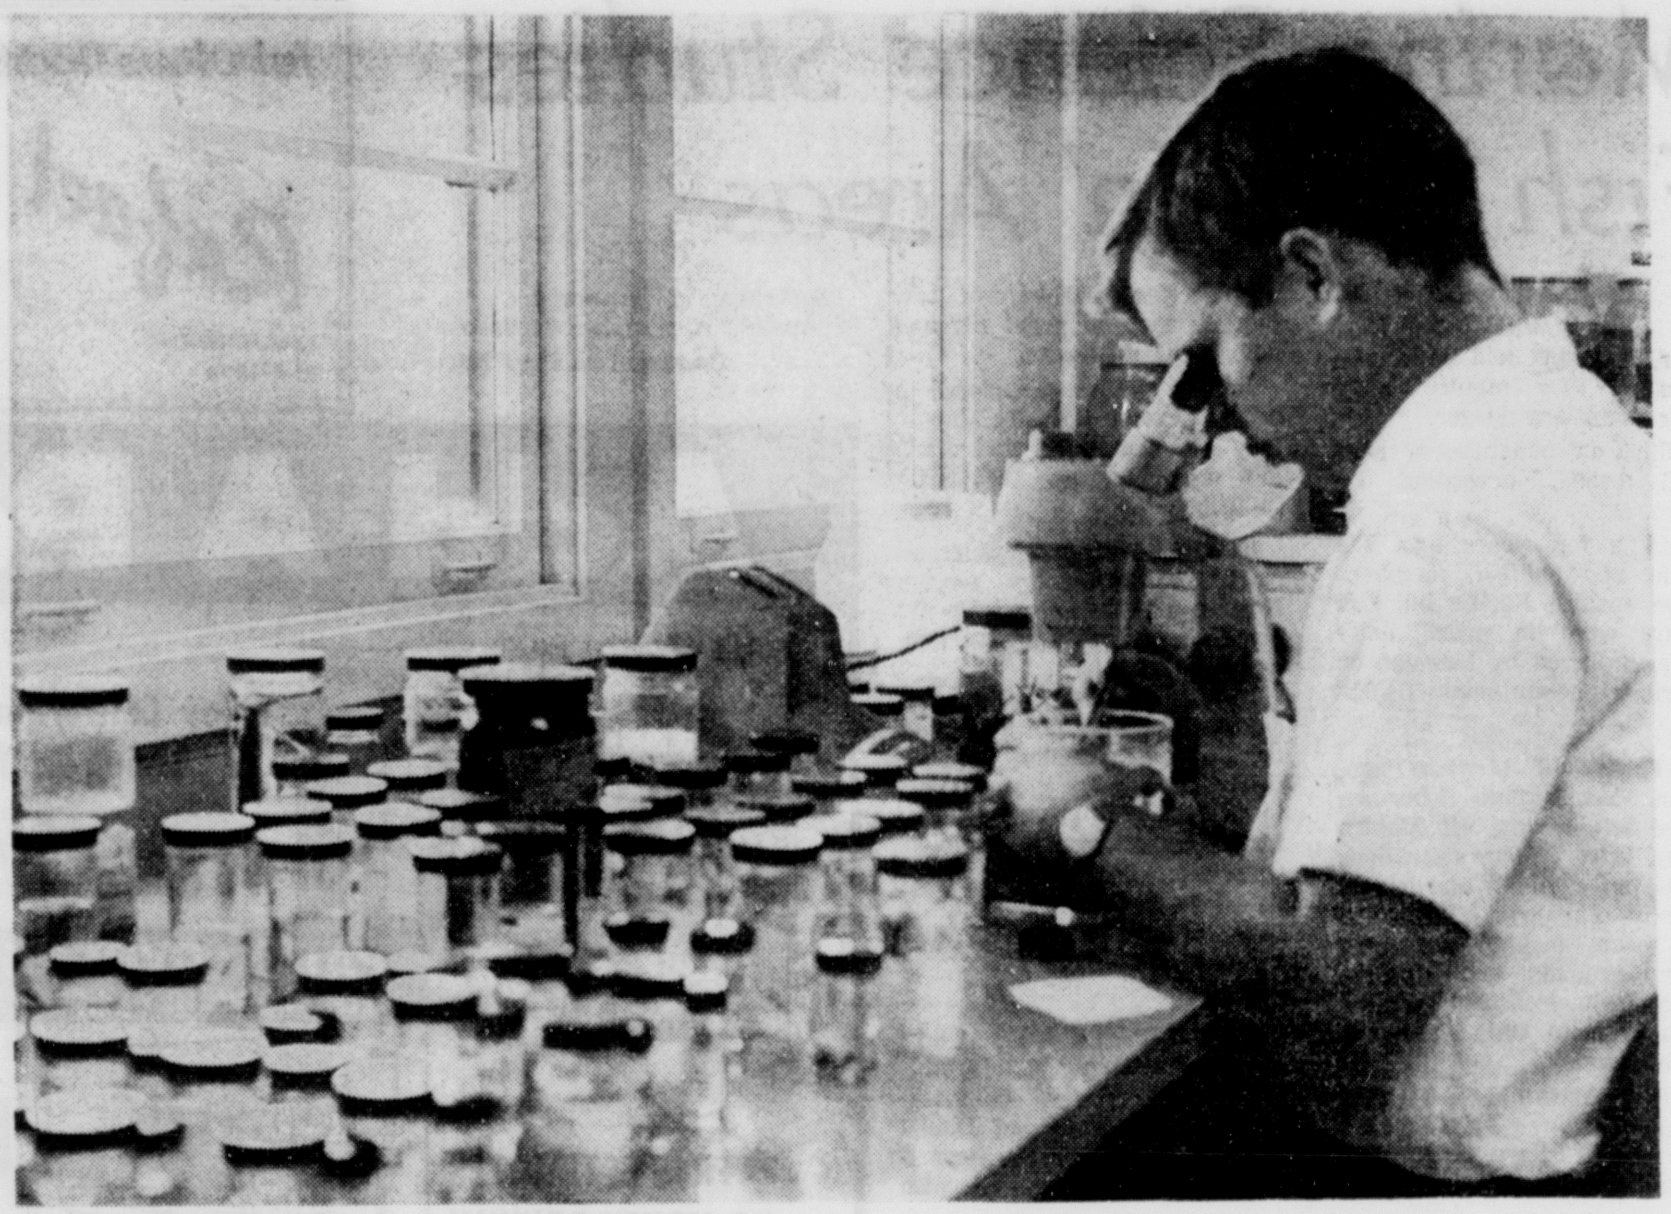
WHEN SOME of these fish are later recaptured, tag numbers determine when and where they were tagged. From this data, migration patterns are beginning to take shape.

Marlin migrate north during the summer and south during the fall. One tagged marlin was recaptured 1,150 miles from its tagging place. Some tag recoveries indicate an irregular pattern towards the Revilla Gigedo Islands, perhaps for spawning purposes.

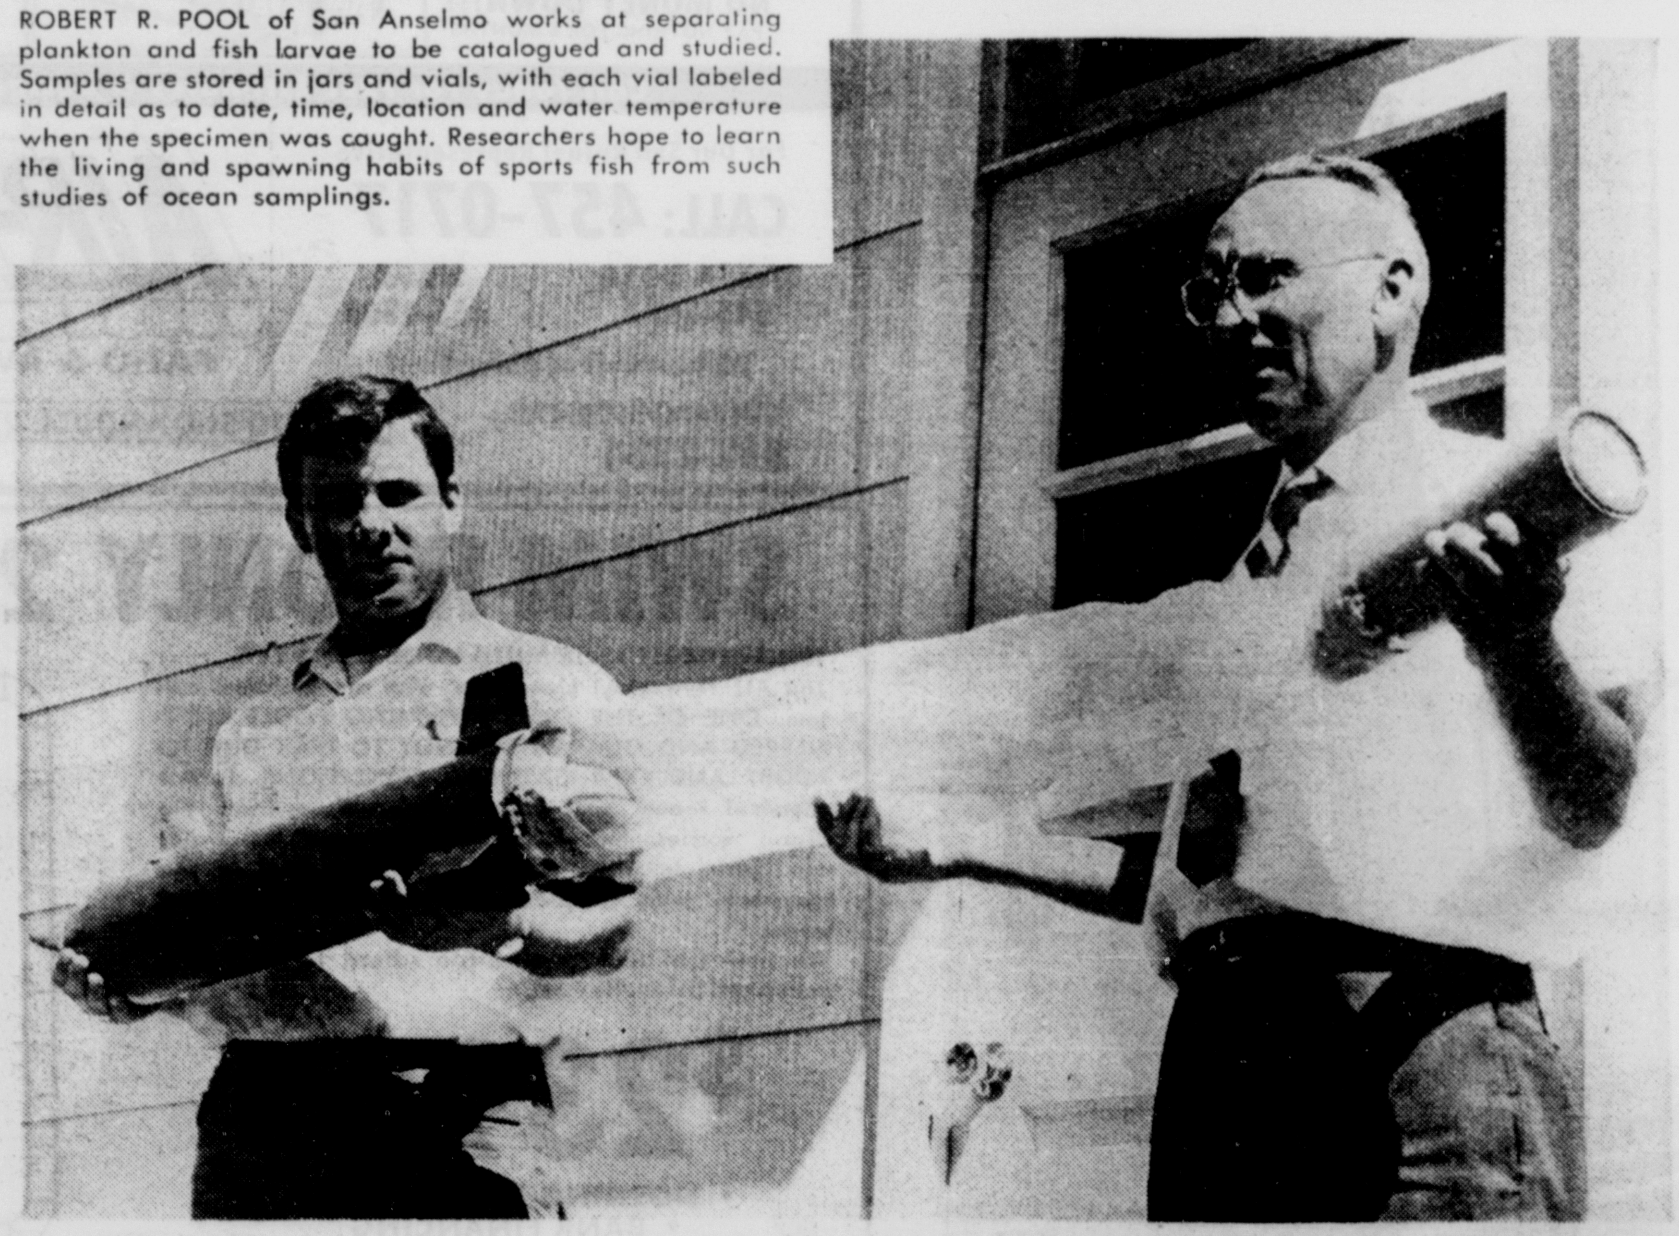
Talbot said the laboratory hopes the results of this and future cruises will answer this mystery and other unsolved riddles about the Pacific billfish.

Squire said a striped marlin was recently reported found south of the Hawaiian Islands, in May, which was tagged last February in Lower California waters. He said the western migration was unusual.

Another marine research vessel is scheduled to go out to practically the same area next month to continue this sampling of the ocean to learn more of the life and sex habits of these important sport fish, in an effort to preserve them.



ROBERT R. POOL of San Anselmo works at separating plankton and fish larvae to be catalogued and studied. Samples are stored in jars and vials, with each vial labeled in detail as to date, time, location and water temperature when the specimen was caught. Researchers hope to learn the living and spawning habits of sports fish from such studies of ocean samplings.



A PLANKTON NET used in making "tows" that catch tiny organisms in the ocean is shown by Gerald R. Talbot, right, director of the Tiburon Marine Laboratory, and Robert R. Pool. Even finer nets are used to catch the minute nekton. (Indenpendent-Journal photos)

PROUDLY OWNER D. Hugh Gregory Coleman shows wife Mary some of the special features that made his 1912 Model T Ford Speedster a winning car in racing under the expert handling of the great Ralph De Palma. The car will still hit the 75-mile-an-hour pace that carried it to victory in its younger days.

The Fun Of Owning An Antique Car

Their 1912 Model T Ford Speedster Gives The Colemans Much Pleasure

By DON KEOWN

The antique automobile, in the opinion of car enthusiast D. Hugh Gregory Coleman, represents the true essence of what the machine should be.

"Every part of it has a purpose, a significance," he explains. "There was nothing superfluous about the early car, nothing that was purely ornamental, although the automobile itself, as a whole, was inherently appealing to the eye."

As an example of those qualities that make the vintage car so attractive to man, Coleman, an architect, can point with pride to his own 1912 Model T Ford Speedster.

SINCE HE acquired that venerable antique in 1964, it has been his chief after-working-hours interest.

His wife, Mary, and their four children, ages 7 through 16, share his enthusiasm for the Model T.

"That car is a member of the family," he grins.

And he jokes: "We tell the baby-sitter: In case of fire, first get the car out of the garage. Then save the children."

COLEMAN SAYS his interest in antique cars came suddenly and unexpectedly one day back in 1962. He and his wife saw such a vehicle parked along the highway while they were out for a drive.

"We got to talking about it," he recalls, "and one thing led to another. Our interest was kindled. And pretty soon we were looking into antique automobiles as a hobby."

Even before Coleman acquired a vintage car, he became a member of the Horseless Carriage Club of America and the Antique Automobile Club of America. Later he was to join the Model T Ford International, another organization.

MEANWHILE, Coleman launched a search for a car of his own. It proved to be a lengthy quest.

"As a native of Marin County, I began here," he says. "I started tracking down leads. Someone would tell me about a car, and I would track it down, only to discover that it had been junked five years or six months earlier, or it would turn out to be a 1940 Dodge, hardly an antique."

Coleman widened his hunt. Through friends and friends of friends, he put out feelers for antique automobiles throughout California, and in Arizona, Nevada, Oregon, Washington and Idaho. Still, he had no success.

"ANY ACQUAINTANCE who came to our home or any client who came to my office was inevitably asked if he knew of an available antique car," Coleman remembers with a smile.

The architect was about to give up what seemed a futile project. Then came a break.

"A child in our neighborhood told me one day that he knew of an old car belonging to a man who lived only four blocks from us," Coleman says. "I hadn't much hope, but I decided to look into it."

TO COLEMAN'S delight, the car turned out to be a 1912 Model T Speedster, stored in its owner's garage.

The man, a car enthusiast, had other automobiles. And he was running out of space. So he was willing to sell the Ford.

"It seemed to be in great shape," Coleman says. "I was overjoyed."

This was all the more true because Coleman throughout his hunt harbored the hope that he might wind up with a Model T. Some 20 years before, as a youth, he had owned two Model Ts — "one cost me $20, the other $35" — and he had retained a strong affection for those reliable old vehicles.

THE DEAL WAS completed, and Coleman promptly drove his new acquisition to a garage for a check-up.

"The mechanic shook his head," Coleman remembers, "and asked me how in the world I had ever managed to drive the car to the garage. It seems that it was completely without brakes."

The garage soon restored the Model T to running condition.

Since then, Coleman has handled most of the repairs and maintenance himself.

"I'm mechanically inclined," Coleman says, "but I had had no expert experience in such work. But out of sheer interest and enthusiasm, you can learn a lot, and learn it fast."

TO FURTHER his progress, Coleman enrolled in a night school course in automobile mechanics.

Not too long after purchasing the Model T Speedster, the Colemans decided to enter it in a car show —the Concours d'Elegance sponsored by the Marin Circle of the Florence Crittenton Home in San Francisco. Their original intention was to show their acquisition in the antique car category.

"But it was quickly apparent to us that we had a lot to do before we would be ready for that classification," Coleman recalls. Instead, they were persuaded to enter the division for retired competition cars. To their delight, they won a second place.

THE MODEL T made a return appearance in the Marin show the following year, and again placed second.

This year it will be back for a third time at the Peacock Gap Fifth Annual Concours d'Elegance conducted by the Crittenton circle in conjunction with the Bay Area Car Clubs.

The 1912 Speedster will be very much at home at the Peacock Gap Country Club competition tomorrow, for emphasis is being placed this year upon pre-war cars with 18 classes and sub-classes to be judged by representatives of the Concours Council of Bay Area Car Clubs.

The show at the country club off San Pedro Road, San Rafael, will run from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

JUST WHAT IS a Model T Ford Speedster?

The "Speedster," Coleman explains, refers to the car that was modified or assembled especially for competitive racing purposes.

"The Speedster was never a production car," he continues. "Instead, it was a product of 'shade tree' mechanics who began with a chassis, usually a Model T because of its relatively modest price, and from that built up a car with speed and power."

If the Speedster was not itself a factory production car, it gave rise to a considerable industry as firms sprang up to provide the necessary equipment and accessories.

THE COLEMANS' Model T Speedster has behind it a colorful racing career that has included competition with famed Ralph De Palma behind its steering wheel.

Its creator boosted the potential speed of his car from the usual 20 miles an hour maximum of that time to 75 miles an hour. "And," says Coleman proudly, "she can still hit 75 today."

Such speed made necessary a better cooling system, and the standard thermal siphon system was improved by means of a water pump and a unique radiator manufactured by Livingston Brothers of New York. The radiator was streamlined and V-shaped, to nearly double its cooling surface.

THE SPLASH oil system that was adequate for the standard Model T except on steep hills was improved with a pressure oil system functioning by means of a pump to all the main bearings.

In order to produce more speed, the standard heavy cast iron pistons gave way to a relatively new metal known now as aluminum.

Additional power was obtained through a then amazing innovation that is what we know today as an overhead valve system in a high compression head. It was the invention of a man named Johnson of Racine, Wis. — hence the name "Rajo" head.

THE STANDARD transmission, which functioned on virtually the same principle as our present day automatic transmission except that it was operated manually by three foot-actuated pedals, was utilized in the Speedster with very little modification except for lightening the flywheel.

An accessory differential manufactured by the Ruxtel Co. of Berkeley provided still greater power.

Cumbersome wooden artillery wheels were replaced with wire spoke wheels called Buffalo Wheels and manufactured in Los Angeles.

THE ONLY OTHER safety feature was an accessory brake known as the Rocky Mountain Brake, a San Francisco product.

"Strangely enough, in all those many years of speed racing, seat belts were never considered," Coleman says.

The high, cumbersome bodies were replaced by a very simple cowling, bucket seats and a small wooden tool box, all obtainable in the local parts supply house of the day.

It was necessary then to have an assistant ride with the driver to handle such duties as activating the pumps for the gas and oil supplies and the searchlight for illuminating by gas the road during night cross-country racing.

THE STEERING wheel was a "fat man's wheel" that folded to enable the driver to enter his seat — a device since re-invented by the Thunderbird designers.

BUILT-IN TELEVISION — For the past several years we have not been able to furnish component type television sets which could be integrated into custom systems. Several years back the Craftsman TV chassis and the Fleetwood TV chassis were available.

The 1968 RCA television line includes models that can be incorporated in our custom consoles or custom wall built-ins. For many of you that have been waiting for the opportunity to add color TV to your music wall, the RCA is the answer. RCA now makes color television in several screen sizes housed in plain black metal boxes. These units can be pushed into the allotted space very easily.

The top of the line is the BROMLEY. This is a deluxe unit with a large 23" picture tube (formerly called the 25"). The model features the new RCA picture tube with 38% more highlight brightness for improved contrast in any room lighting. The TV also features a "one-set VHF fine tuning"—once set, it seldom needs changing. The BROMLEY costs $509.95. This model is also available with the "wireless wizard" remote control for $609.95. The "wireless wizard" is an 82-channel remote control. It tunes in any of the VHF and UHF telecasting in our area. It also tunes "color" and "tint," turns volume up and down, turns picture and sound on and off—even turns power completely off.

The ASHBURY is another RCA 23" color TV set, not available with remote control, and costs only $489.95. The BARRIE is a 20" color TV set in a black box and it costs only $418.88. The ARLEN is an 18" Color TV set in a black box and costs $389.95. Also available in the new RCA line is the color SPORTABOUT. This is a compact 14" set, weighing less than 42 lbs., with built-in antenna, that can be carried easily from room to room. The price is only $339.95.

Color, or black and white TV can now be a part of your custom console or your music wall. Visit our new store for a demonstration of RCA's vibrant new color.

MARY COLEMAN finds it necessary to hold onto her bonnet as her husband D. Hugh Gregory Coleman, architect and automobile enthusiast, accelerates his still lively 1912 Model T Ford Speedster. The Colemans acquired the antique car in 1964, and since then have derived hours of enjoyment from their unusual automobile. They will be showing their car at tomorrow's big concours d'elegance at the Peacock Gap Country Club, San Rafael. (Independent-Journal photos)

THIS IS A scene that will bring back memories to former Model T owners of decades back. After a steep climb, D. Hugh Gregory Coleman pauses to give the Speedster's engine a chance to cool and recuperate. The Model T, however, was equal to the challenge.

AND THIS TOO should be familiar to everyone who once owned and drove the Model T. D. Hugh Gregory Coleman puts his arm muscles to work as he cranks up the 1912 Speedster preparatory to a spin. It is part, he says, of the fun of an antique car.

D. HUGH GREGORY Coleman shows you how the "fat man's steering wheel" of the 1912 Speedster works, folding to enable the driver to gain his seat easily. The device has since been "reinvented" by luxury car manufacturers.

The Colemans And Their Model T

not unusual for the time running boards are other features of the 1912 Speedster.

"It is," says Coleman, "a fun car. We enjoy it to the utmost."

"We are liable to jump into it at our slightest whim and take off on a jaunt," he says.

ALL SIX Colemans can —and have — ridden together in the Speedster. But it does cause problems.

Consequently, Coleman has acquired a second antique car —a 1914 Model T which he is currently rebuilding. This one is a depot hack or jitney that carried passengers between train station and hotel — "the granddaddy of our station wagon."

In it there will be ample room for all the Colemans.

Coleman, however, has no intention of parting with his beloved 1912 Speedster. "It will be with us until death do us part," he jokes.

THE COLEMANS recently moved from San Rafael to Bolinas. There the garage is occupied by the two Model Ts, while a 1965 Ford station wagon and a 1966 Ford convertible sit outside.

The Colemans can recall with pleasure a great many happy experiences aboard their 1912 Speedster including overnight tours, sometimes in costumes of the era when the car was the newest and fastest thing on the road or track.

"I'd like to find me a World War I aviator's helmet," Coleman says. "That, with the goggles, would be the really authentic headgear for a drive of a Speedster."

THE CAR cruises easily at 45 to 50 miles an hour, Coleman says, returns 30 miles to a gallon of gasoline, and maneuvers easily, "you can turn around in a parking space." There is no shimmy.

Coleman recalls with a laugh the day he and his wife drove to Marinwood in the Model T to visit friends. "One thing led to another, and we stayed much later than we had expected. It was something like 1 a.m. when we started for home."

He recalls how cars would pass the ancient Model T, and then would come the sound of screeching brakes as the drivers slowed abruptly for a closer look at the strange vehicle moving at a sedate but steady pace along the highway.

"BUT IT IS a good thing we didn't run into any highway patrol officers," Coleman admits. "They would have taken a dim view of us driving on 101 with gas-lit headlights."

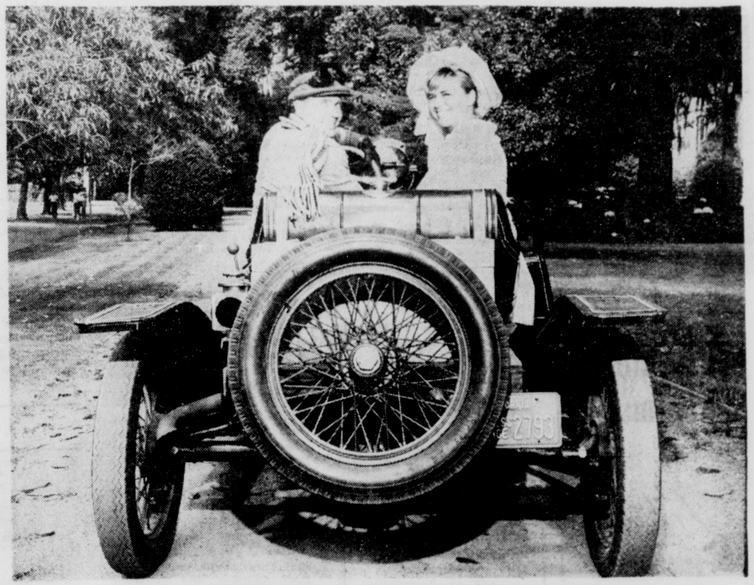
The Colemans enjoy car shows, whether competing or attending as spectators. Antique, classic and sports cars interest them alike. But they feel no envy for the owners of the Rolls Royce, the Mercedes Benz or the sleek MGs.

"We are happy with and proud of our Model Ts. Somehow, they seem to represent to us the very best traits of the automobile," Coleman says.

THEN HE grins: "Sometimes a sports car owner will jokingly ask me if I would like to race. I had a Jaguar driver challenge me just the other day.

"And I told him: 'Sure, I'll race you. If you'll let me choose the course.'"

Coleman laughs: "I would have taken him over the bumpiest tracks I could find. He would never have made it. But the Speedster would have come through with flying colors."



THE SMILES ON the faces of the D. Hugh Gregory Colemans indicate the enjoyment they derive from their 1912 Model T Ford Speedster. It is, they say, a "fun car." But the veteran vehicle is also quite capable of still providing fast, dependable transportation.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

BEETHOVEN: String Quartets Opus 59, Nos. 1, 2, 3; Opus 74 (complete); and Opus 95. The Fine Arts Quartet — Concert-Disco SP 506/3:

I have waxed enthusiastically about the Fine Arts Quartet before in this column; they have my vote for whatever they do.

Their communication of Beethoven's great chamber works is unsurpassed in combining just the right degree of musicology with a virtuoso flair and style.

These "middle quartets" are works of a time when the composer was leaving the Classic style and moving into the Romantic style, albeit Romantic a la Beethoven. The three quartets of Opus 59, "The Rasoumouffsky Quartets," have very little Russian about them, but for a couple of themes. The single Opus 74 quartet is subtitled "The Harp" because of the pizzicato passages in the first movement. It is beautifully melodic.

This is a fine collection by fine performers; but the surfaces of these discs are the noisiest of any this writer has reviewed in years. If you have playback equipment of any fidelity at all, you will find these discs hard to accept.

RECORDER MUSIC, OLD AND NEW — Works by Byrd, Bach, Fresco-Baldi, Gabrielli, Mico, Monteclair, Hindemith, Varnier, Meek, and Jones — The Duschenes Recorded Quartet — Baroque Records BC 2857:

As interest in recorders continues to grow, especially here in Marin County, more LPs devoted to professional, unsqueaky versions of recorder favorites are appearing in the catalog.

This Canadian-made recording presents a fine cross-section of music which is divided with the old music on Side 1 and the 20th century compositions on Side 2. The latter are first recordings and most enjoyable. Hindemith's "Trio for Recorders" is carefree and piquant in its harmonies. Four pieces by the Canadian composer Kelsey Jones are also in the modern idiom while fitting the unique recorder sound perfectly.

A Family In History—The Fabulous Nehrus Of India

By DON KEOWN

WE NEHRUS by Krishna Nehru Hutheesing with Alden Hatch, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 343 pages, $6.95.

ALL ABOUT WINE by Blake Ozias, Crowell, 144 pages, $3.50.

Americans often refer rather glibly to India as the 20th century's great experiment in democracy, without any real appreciation of the enormity of the problems involved, past, present or future.

A reading of "We Nehrus" by Krishna Neru Hutheesing and Alden Hatch will sharpen the by Krishna Nehru Hutheesing and Alden Hatch will sharpen the perspective of what has been

It will also provide a fascinating inside view of one of recent history's most influential families — Asia's answer to the Kennedys, the Roosevelts and the Adamses.

Mme. Hutheesing is the sister of India's first prime minister and the aunt of its present leader.

Jawaharlal Nehru is, of course, the principal figure in the book. His much younger sister reveals a great deal about his complex character, his philosophy, his motivations. Although the least political of the Nehrus, she is nevertheless able to provide insight into Nehru's political and diplomatic moves that hitherto has been missing.

On the other hand, she tells us disappointingly little about Jawaharlal's daughter Indira Gandhi who now leads India in a time of almost terrifying turmoil and tension.

Second to Jawaharlal Nehru in attention in the book is his father Motilal Nehru, wealthy patriarch and patriot. There are also fascinating glimpses of India's spiritual and inspirational godfather Mahatma Gandhi, and analysis of the relationship of the Nehrus to the man they admired and loved but with whom they did not always agree.

The book is sometimes a disappointment in its focus. For instance, the reader learns much more about the bitter India-Pakistan enmity with its religious roots, from, of course, a highly partisan point-of-view, than he does about the even graver population-and-food crisis. Nor is there one word about the sudden India thrust ousting Portugal from Goa that disillusioned many of Nehru's pacifist and liberal admirers.

But the book does touch many bases and answer some important questions.

And veteran author Hatch, Mme. Hutheesing's collaborator, must be credited with a splendid job of putting her memoirs in a most readable format and style.

THERE IS, Blake Ozias admits, no shortage of encyclopedic tomes dealing learnedly with the subject of wines.

What is lacking, he claims, is a thin, concise, non-technical book that covers the subject in sufficient depth to meet the layman's needs without bogging down in details and irrelevant snobbery.

"All About Wine" is his effort to fill that void, and a commendable one it is.

In 144 pages, Ozias has covered his subject well. He discusses the basics of viniculture, wine nomenclature and the selection of wines. He covers individually each of the major wine-producing countries, their regions and the special qualities of their products. He provides the foundation for setting up a wine cellar.

And, most important for the majority of us, he offers guidance on the ordering of wine in restaurants, and the serving of it in the home.

Also of special interest is the short chapter on vintages, and the discussion of sherry and port.

Ozias uses his own international background to advantage. The wine connoisseur is American-born of French descent, lived and worked in France for 20 years, has traveled extensively and has also resided in England. But in the writing of his book he has enjoyed the invaluable assistance of two of the world's great authorities, France's Andre Simon and Frank Schoonmaker.

Ozias has produced an interesting, unpretentious, no-nonsense book, free of petty, prejudicial judgments, that will answer most of the questions of the neophyte venturing into the fascinating field of the crushed grape.

TWO TINY curiosities come from one of our favorite publishers, Stephen Greene of Brattleboro, Vt., as part of his "The Victorian Library" series of reprints from another era:

"The Home Exerciser: Invigorating Bodily Development in the Bosom of the Family" by Oliver Strongfort, M.A., "with 110 graphic illustrations drawn from life." Along with calisthenics, Indian club exercising, "flinging the arms about," swimming, skating, etc., it preaches and depicts the merits of erectitude and warns the women against "the wretched habit" of tight lacing of their stays.

"Little Emily's Object Book" or "A Primer for the Recognition & Correct Spelling of Common Objects as Selected and Compiled by Mrs. Goode." Drawings and labels introduced the children to an assortment of objects, from button-holes to barge, from field mouse to yak.

These delightful little relics with "camp" as well as nostalgic appeal sell for $1.95 each.

A MOST useful candidate for the reference shelf is the new information almanac, "California: Past, Present, Future," put together by Edward and Evelyn Salitore with the assistance of a distinguished panel of consultants from the schools and universities, and distributed by Doubleday & Co.

Attractively designed and profusely illustrated, the softcover book offers concise and quick information on our state's history, government, geography, biology, economy, sociology, etc. You can find a list of California Indian rancherias and reservations, the population and altitude of any town, thumbnail sketches of the physical attributes and the industries of each county, the status of the various sports, a roster of the museums of art and much else.

Ideal for the writer, teacher and student, and for the newcomer to the state.

THE FIRST WORLD Congress of New Poetry at Liege, Belgium, appointed Leon Spiro, editor of the S-B Gazette, Sausalito, as delegate for the United States during 1968.

Spiro, as delegate-poet, will accept individually published works of American poets for exhibit and judging by the Belgian Congress.

The deadline is June 1, 1968. Poets should submit entries to World Congress, Post Office Box 731, Sausalito, and include a self-addressed stamped envelope.

TWO OF THE NEHRUS, India's late prime minister, Jawaharlal, and his youngest sister, Krishna, are shown in this family album snapshot reproduced in her just-published book "We Nehrus."

They are given, too, detailed instruction on how to proceed — soil preparation, watering, feeding, pest control, repotting, etc. There is assistance in the selection of a container and guidance in designing and making your own. And there are ideas on the effective use of container plants, both in your outdoor landscaping and your indoor decor.

As with all Sunset books, photographs are used profusely and effectively. How-to-do-it drawings are another aid.

Gardening is a field in which Sunset has held an unchallenged leadership in the West. This new edition of an old favorite is typical of the good, sound books that have established that reputation.

PLAY LIKE YOU'RE DEAD by Whit Masterson, Dodd, Mead, 214 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Masterson has written a sound and absorbing suspense yarn.

A frantic young mother goes to the police for help when her divorced husband makes off with their 7-year-old son. At first, Sgt. Connie Delos is skeptical that the lad is in any real peril. But it soon develops that the father is psychotic, and that the danger to the boy is very real indeed. The pursuit of the fugitive and his young captive is exciting and interesting, conducted by people who are believable and behave accordingly.

A Predecessor To Black Power Advocates Today

PAUL ROBESON: THE AMERICAN OTHELLO by Edwin P. Hoyt, World, 228 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

In this time of H. Rap Brown and Stokely Carmichael, it is not often remembered that white Americans once directed similar dismay, fear and venom at Paul Robeson as a dangerous extemist.

It is safe to say that today's more activistic Negro leaders would have regarded the singer-actor at his most controversial stage as a moderate at most, perhaps even as an "Uncle Tom."

But Robeson was in many respects the forerunner of today's freedom-now, black-power advocates.

We will have to await a less tumultuous and partisan period in history for a dispassionate verdict on the Browns and Carmichaels. But writer Edwin P. Hoyt feels that the time is ripe for an evaluation of Robeson.

His conclusions in "Paul Robeson: The American Othello" are generally sympathetic to the great Negro athlete who achieved still wider fame on the concert and theater stage, and then risked it all in his outspoken anger at the racial intolerance he had witnessed and experienced in his native land.

The American white society of that time could accept Robeson's condemnation of racial injustice, although it continued smugly to condone those practices. What it could not accept were Robeson's pro-Communist views and statements.

Robeson, as shown by Hoyt, was always far more anti-discrimination than he was pro-Communist. His admiration for the Soviet system stemmed directly from his belief that it was free from racial bias.

Hoyt finds that Robeson was naive and frequently foolish. But he also makes it plain that those faults were dwarfed by the defects of a white society so overcome by its anti-Communist psychosis that it lost its powers of reason. The culmination came in the hysterical, savage riots of 1949 at Peekskill, N.Y, that make up one of the sorriest pages in the story of American democracy.

Hoyt, a very busy writer, is also, it seems to us, an inconsistent one. Some of his books have been excellent and others mediocre. This is one of the good ones. It tells us far more about the public Robeson than it does about his private life. But in that respect, it is well researched. The findings are placed in sound historical perspective. And the book is well written.

Novellas On The Rootless

THE PUZZLEHEADED GIRL by Christina Stead, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 255 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Elizabeth Rogers.

The art of the novella is one which has never been satisfactorily defined.

It is something more than a short story, something less than a novel, and its essence is determined not so much by length as by the character of its presentation. Christina Stead's group of four novellas belongs in this category, but does not dispel the reader's bewilderment as to the nature of this literary form.

If there is any single effect obtained, it is the author's concern with the American young woman and her search for identity. She shows her at home and abroad, rootless, buffeted by circumstances, unable to attach meaning to life or to discover her place in the world. Miss Stead's place among today's writers of distinction is due to her ability to present these slices of life in a manner so believable that the reader cannot help but respond.

The title story, "The Puzzleheaded Girl," is a probing character study. The lean, objective writing is almost like a journalist's report of events. Here the skill of the writer makes the events define the main character, and because the study is concentrated, it has unity and is probably the best example of the novella in this collection.

Similar in structure and treatment is "The Dianas," which deals with a girl from a different background. On the other hand, "Girl from the Beach" is less successful because it moves from one character to another, giving only partial definition to each. The reader loses the thread of his interest and has difficulty picking it up to form a whole image. The amount of material might have been better contained within a novel.

Miss Stead shows such delicate insight in the realm of character that one tends to think of this as being her real forte. However, the story entitled "The Rightangled Creek" shows another dimension to her talent. It is almost exclusively a mood piece, rich and expressive, as if it had been produced by an entirely different writer. This alone makes the book worth reading — particularly for those who appreciate the structure of style and its effects.

A NEW PUBLISHER'S JACKPOT

GREAT WESTERN SHORT STORIES edited by J. Golden Taylor, American West Publishing Co., 566 pages, $11.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

American West Publishing Co. — an off-shoot of the Western History Association — has hit the jackpot of excellence with its first book venture.

J. Golden Taylor has made such an excellent selection for "Great Western Short Stories" that this fat volume should become a classic among anthologies.

As Wallace Stegner, editor of American West magazine, explains in the introduction, these are not all Western short stories with the capital "W." Some of them are. There are such classics of the school as Bret Harte's "The Outcasts of Poker Flat" and Stephen Crane's "The Bride Comes to Yellow Sky."

But there are also western stories with a small "w" — stories set in the American West, but not in the patterns made familiar by the late-lamented pulp magazines, Hollywood and the "idiot box." There are, for instance, such far-from-formula pieces as Juanita Brooks' "The Outsider," a story of a visitor to an isolated Mormon community, and Ray B. West Jr.'s "The Last of the Grizzly Bears."

The list of authors reads much like a "Who's Who" of western literature: Oliver La Farge, Will Henry, Frederic Remington, Mark Twain, Walter Van Tilburg Clark, etc. — not to overlook the redoubtable Max Brand (Frederick Faust), from whose fabulous production editor Taylor selected "Wine on the Desert," one of the best.

There are also Owen Wister (of course), Hamlin Garland, Eugene Manlove Rhodes, Jack London, and — well, you get the idea.

In all, 31 stories that deserve the title of 'Great" are included in the well-printed, well-bound volume. For any lover of excellently crafted short fiction or of western lore, "Great Western Short Stories" is a rare find. To the lover of both, it is pure delight.

An Honest Effort At Historical Novel By German Writer

TAMBURAS by Karlheinz Grosser, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 442 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by James E. Williams.

The heyday of the Persian Empire is retraced in this historical novel which no doubt will be turned into an epic film similar to the highly successful "Ben Hur."

It has all the elements; a dash of sex, super wars with thousands in combat, a crazed king and adventure on the high seas.

But surprisingly enough, German author Karlheinz Grosser weaves his story with sometimes electric dialogue and to a certain sense of responsibility to the "real" facts of history.

The central character is Tamburas, bastard son of the Tyrant of Athens, who is driven from his home by alleged threats of his brothers. His wanderings bring him into the presence of the tempestuous reign of King Cambyses (529-522 B.C.). Tamburas eventually leads Cambyses' legions to victory over Egypt.

Full of detail, the book vividly pictures men preparing for battle, the blood-letting and the orgy-type victorious celebrations.

A disturbing factor not related to the author's labors, however, is the ghastly three-dimensional type cover. It looks like something advertising those monster 3-D movies of the 1950s. Very unjust to a good attempt at historical fiction.

The Job Of The Campus Minister

NEVER TRUST A GOD OVER 30 edited by Albert H. Friedlander, McGraw-Hill, 212 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by James E. Williams.

The campus minister of today faces the greatest challenge ever presented to him: the student of the 1960s, who belongs to what some refer to as the "revolting generation."

But as William F. Starr, counselor to Episcopal students at Columbia, views it: "Students are rebelling because they do not feel at home in the world as it is. They find that everything is laid out for them, if they play the game."

He continues by saying it would be misleading to suggest that the political area is the only battlefield for the "new student." But Starr claims the student is drawn to the political area because it "displays so many of the symptoms of hypocrisy and decay that he sees in our society."

To face the challenge of the new breed of collegian, he concludes, the campus ministry must move out from secure patterns of the past toward horizons yet unknown.

Starr is only one of six religious counselors contributing to this stimulating essay. Also the student viewpoint is expressed by two Columbia graduate students who see today's student as optimistic and still interested in the human race.

For anyone closely linked with today's collegian, much food for thought is expressed in the relatively short work.

As Rabbi Friedlander sees it, a campus chaplain can ultimately fulfill his religious function by entering the student's life with full concern, become a genuine spokesman of student needs and refuse a policeman's role for parents.

A Well-Done Example Of Classic Gothic Formula

THE ROCHEMER HAG by Louise W. King, Doubleday, 214 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

As an example of the classic Gothic suspense novel, "The Rochemer Hag" is due both criticism and praise.

Criticism because it adheres too strictly to formula. All the expected elements are present — the remote English mansion, the damsel-in-distress, the eccentric family, the spectre, etc. — and Miss King demonstrates little originality.

On the other hand, within the rather rigid boundaries of this genre, the author writes very well. She is a splendid storyteller.

Fans of Gothic fiction will no doubt enjoy the book, finding its storyline and its conclusion satisfying if hardly surprising.

And there are a lot worse ways of escaping from daily cares temporarily than sitting down with a tale such as this and journeying with young governess Sophia Sedgewick to Rochemer Hall for some 19th century adventure, suspense and romance.

Some New Reading For The Juniors

Marin's Laura Nelson Baker has a new book, "O Children of the Wind and Pines" (Lippincott, $2.95), that should be one of this year's most appealing Christmas season stories for children.

It is the story of how one child, a motherless Huron Indian girl, found the love and beauty for which she yearned at Christmas-time — thanks to the understanding of a patient missionary.

It is the story, too, of the writing of the first American Christmas carol, based upon the records of early Jesuit missionaries in the Far North.

The carol, words from which provide Mrs. Baker with her title, occupies the concluding pages of the book.

As always, Mrs. Baker demonstrates great sensitivity and storytelling ability, and Inez Storer provides illustrations that have an attractive early Indian-like primitive quality.

Some other new books for junior readers:

LAURA NELSON BAKER, Lagunitas resident and one of America's busiest authors for junior readers, has added "O Children of the Wind and Pines" to her growing list of published books.

"Heroes of the Major Leagues" (Random House, $1.95) by Alexander Peters is another in the Little League Library series for small baseball fans. Peters tells briefly the stories of such contemporary diamond stars as Frank Robinson, Juan Marichal, Sandy Koufax and Hank Aaron. The lively, well-written book is illustrated with some excellent photographs of the baseball greats in action.

"Combat Nurses of World War II" (Random House, $2.50) by Wyatt Blassingame is a Landmarks Series book about those fine young women who served so bravely and so mercifully in Europe, in the Pacific and in North Africa. Blasingame tells their story well, and it should be inspirational to young girls who might some future year enter the magnificent profession of nursing, but who, we hope, will never be called upon to serve in combat. It makes one of the more heroic chapters in the grim and gory story of war.

Grete Mannheim has selected 23 poems about animals and illustrated them with photographs from her camera under the title "Feather or Fur" (Knopf, $3.50). The poetry, by Victor Hugo, Walter de la Mare, Charles Swinborne, Theodore Roethke, Sinclair Lewis and others, explore sensitively the relationship of child to animal. The Mannheim photos are delightfully candid studies of both. A most appealing book.

Jake lives with his Aunt Mavis, who owns a candy store, but isn't very nice. But when Jake is invited to Annie's birthday party, he must ask his aunt to provide a gift. That provides the plot for "The Gumdrop Necklace" (Knopf, $3.25), a compelling story for 7 to 10-year-olds that has just a touch of fantasy. Illustrations are by Alan E. Cober.

What can you do on a rainy day (or any day) when the action is dead to amuse children? Two new "The Fun and Games Book" (one starring Leon the Lion, the other Donald the Dinosaur) by Barbara Kruger Bate, illustrated by Bill Sokol (Platt & Munk) will provide many answers. The games and tricks are easy and can be made with whatever you have around the house. The lion is for ages 5-7, and the dinosaur, ages 7-9.

In "The Magic Summer" (Random House, $3.95), three English youngsters find themselves in Ireland under the care temporarily of an eccentric great aunt they had never before met. Author Noel Streatfeild adds a large helping of adventure and mystery to his excellent characterizations and his splendid portrayal of the Irish countryside and its life to make up a most readable and worthwhile juvenile offering.

High adventure in Mexico is offered in the pages of "Tides of Danger" (Scribner's, $4.50) by Elizabeth Baldwin Hazelton, with much authentic detail on pearl diving and underwater life in the Sea of Cortez as an added fillip. There's a secret island, a number of narrow escapes and much other excitement in store for young 14-year-old Trinidad Delgado as he takes on a mission of the utmost importance to his family. It's in the "Treasure Island" tradition.

Every child loves a birthday party, and children especially will like "Nicole's Birthday," by Maud Frere (Random House, $2.95). Nicole, like all little girls, has a wonderful time, especially because she proves too much of a match for an older, stronger boy cousin in a birthday game. It's an amusing situation. The illustrations by Nadine Forster are first rate.

What's life like for a little boy who must leave mainland China and go to live in Hong Kong? Something about that little boys and life in the crowded Asian crown colony is expertly told in "The Boy in the Rooftop School," by Florence Hayes, illustrated by Jeanyee Wong (Random House, $1.95). Li Wong's adventure should appeal to every small child.

Some basic art advice for 7-year-olds and younger is coupled with delightful humor in "Draw Me an Elephant" (Doubleday, $3.50) by Anne S. Samson. After some hilarious miscues, the child is led inevitably to the conclusion that the best way to draw an elephant, or anything else, is to do it his way. A very imaginative little book, it makes a point that more and more art instructors, but too few parents, have come to accept — that creativity flourishes best when encouraged and given free rein, not guided and restricted.

Something for children to put some thought into is "Birds, Frogs and Moonlight," translated by Sylvia Cassedy and Kunihiro Suetake, illustrated by Vo-Dinh (Doubleday, $3.50). The book is a collection of classic Japanese Haiku (pronounced high-Koo) the three-line poems of 17 syllables. Children are told how to compose their own and then the examples are given in English and translated Japanese.

A pack of fun for the little ones is "A Case of the Giggles" (World, $2.95) brought on by William Cole with the help of illustrator Tomi Ungerer. The slipcover sized for small hands contains two tiny volumes, "Limerick Giggles" and "Rhyme Giggles." Cole uses the kind of outrageous nonsense that has tickled the funnybones of the small fry for generations. The drawings, too, are merry to the point of having the ageless appeal of slapstick.

A particularly charming picture and story book is Edna Miller's "Mousekin Finds a Friend" (Prentice-Hall, $4.25). It is a part of a series of adventure books created by Miss Miller around her appealing little mouse hero. Like its predecessors, this book is filled with irresistible small animal characters, done realistically in soft colors. The artwork is as good as you will find in the children's field today, and the story of Mousekin's search for a solution to his loneliness will entrance the tots and younger children.

Biology Professors Produce Natural Science Guidebook

A FIELD GUIDE TO NATURAL HISTORY OF THE SAN FRANCISCO PENINSULA by J. C. Williams and H. C. Monroe, McCutchan Publishing Corp., 285 pages, $5.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

This comprehensive handbook prepared by two College of San Mateo biology department faculty members and published in Berkeley by John McCutchan is certain to be a boon to northern California nature enthusiasts regardless of their age.

Williams and Monroe have set forth the basic geological, biological and botanical pattern of their area, a challenging subject, indeed, in view of the bewildering variety to be found in the Bay Area.

Theoretically, their area stops south of the Golden Gate. But a great deal of the material is, of course, applicable to Marin. And the Marinite-naturalist's interests do not cease abruptly at his county boundary lines, anyway.

The authors offer first an introductory geological history of the peninsula and a discussion of its weather. They then take up separately the various sections to be found within that region — the bay and salt marshes, the open coast, the chaparral, etc. — outlining the conditions of each, and then the principal plant and animal life to be found within them. Drawings and photographs are used liberally and effectively to supplement the text.

The book has the format of a class text and would be most useful as such. But it would also make a valuable addition to the reference shelf, or as a companion on organized or informal field trips, and is available in a loose-leaf spiral edition. It also makes engrossing armchair reading for the person interested in or concerned about the natural life around us that is yet abundant — but for how long?

England's Country Pubs

On a nice evening in England there is really only one place to be — in an English pub.

Nowhere else on earth is the beer like England's beer, and beer is the best long drink in the world.

Less than an hour's drive from the center of London you can lose yourself in rural Kent, the garden of England. There is a road around every field and a country pub on every other corner.

Too many people have tried in vain to define the "atmosphere" of the English pub. Those in town — especially London — are fine, but the country pubs are closer to the image. And they defy analysis.

THE COUNTRY pubs are all different and yet much the same. The best are the small ones, often old coaching inns with oak beams and carriage lamps. You soon recognize the relatively few fake ones, and that makes you appreciate the genuine article all the more.

Leaning on the bar exchanging chatter with Mine Host or sitting outside in the garden, the drink of the day is, of course, beer. The hops come from the fields around you.

A half of best bitter and a freshly cut sandwich is the English equivalent of the poet's jug of wine, a loaf of bread and thou beside me in the wilderness. And an Englishman would not change it for the world.

ONE WAY TO sample a few English pubs is to rent a car and just drive around. Better still, rent a chauffeur-driven car and be driven around — it is much safer and barely more expensive.

It is only fair to offer a few suggestions from British Overseas Airways Corporation, which flies to London from San Francisco and Honolulu:

For example, get on to the A25 road which runs east-west across the southeast corner of England between Guildford, in the county of Surrey, into Kent and towards Maidstone. On the A25 and on either side of that road are many small English villages with superb pubs.

HERE, AS A guide, are five very different ones; with four chosen for their food as much as for the beer:

Leave London on the A20 London-Folkestone road and head for the A25 near Wrotham. The first stop is the Blacksmith's Arms. (There is one in Essex, but it's the Kent one you want, in Stansted, just to the left of the A10 shortly before Wrotham). It's in a fine, quiet little village, and the bread and cheese you buy are very special.

Not only does the cheese include the finest English varieties but the bread is home-baked on the spot.

THEY SAY the rolling English drunkard made the rolling English road, a statement to which you may subscribe after driving from Wrotham down the twisting lanes to the right of the A10 to join up with the A25. At Bessel's Green you will find the King's Head. It is modern but has the coaching inn atmosphere. And the toasted sandwiches are the perfect companion to the draught beer.

Head west through Kent along the A25 and past the charming town of Sevenoaks to Brasted. The Bull at Brasted is not in the oak beams and lanterns tradition. It's quite plain, but it's a friendly pub which serves fine, hot snacks.

Every pub really ought to have a cheerful landlord and a big friendly dog. The Bull has both — the dog is a great favorite with the locals and the landlord is an ex-BOAC air steward.

FROM BRASTED a narrow lane heads south to Toys Hill. Just below Toys Hill, along a little lane to the left, is Ide Hill. Neither should be missed. The Tally Ho at Toys Hill has a magnificent view from the North Downs across the wide and fertile Weald of Kent, and again the food is good.

The Cock at Ide Hill is the finest of them all. It's a beautiful pub.

Facing a village green, it looks the perfect prototype of a real old English pub. And that is just what it is. Low ceilings, small windows, cheerful, and a fine place for a tankard of ale and a sandwich. Definitely not to be missed — though it may spoil you for lesser pubs.

From Ide Hill head north again back to the A25 and go through Westerham, another splendid small town with some excellent pubs. But from now on you are on your own. . .

Vinyl Slipcovers Are Best Way To Freshen Old Kitchen Cabinet

Handyman's Page

If you can make a dress or table from a pattern, you should be able to slipcover worn kitchen cabinets from a pattern you make.

You won't actually make something that is pulled over the cabinets, but you can fit vinyl papers or other washable materials to doors and drawers of worn cabinets to make them look more presentable.

Metal kitchen cabinets that have become eyesores due to scratches, specks of caked-on grease and oily finger marks can be freshened by a new veneer.

AMATEUR SPRAY painting is fine, but not so successful as professional spray painting unless more than one coat is used. The cabinets look beautiful for a time, but soon again those finger marks and smudges turn up. It would not be so bad if these dusky imprints could be removed with abrasives and elbow grease. But some of the paint may come off if one attempts to clean these newly painted surfaces.

Two or three coats may keep well but most amateurs find one application is tiring enough and additional applications can add considerably to the expense.

A better solution to the problem seems to be in the application of washable vinyls and vinyl papers.

IT ISN'T EASY because you are on your own — there are no patterns available because of the variety of cabinets. But a home sewer or carpenter or patient homemaker can use common sense and figure out how to apply these materials.

For example, you must size up exactly how the material will fit each area. If the door slopes at top and bottom, you will have to carry the material over and under it. But then, will it bump when it is closed? Will it close? You can test this by putting some material of the same weight over the top or bottom of the door.

If doors are straight and flush, great. You can measure the material and doors, coat them with the proper adhesive and slap it on, smoothing it down. The excess material may be removed with a razor blade.

A DRAWER IN cabinets must be sized up carefully, particularly if it is a sloping kind and has sides that may be seen when the drawer is closed. In that case, make the pattern for the side piece before pasting down the drawer front piece. Bring the front part slightly over the side section, pasting down, and then paste the side piece over it. This gives a nice neat finish.

If drawers, cabinet drawers and everything to be covered are absolutely straight and smooth, one of the adhesive-backed papers can be used. But these aren't too easy to use when you have handles or uneven surfaces to cope with.

You can do a much better job of the whole thing if drawers and doors and handles can be removed easily. But don't take the doors off if they look too intricate as you may have trouble getting them to hang properly when you rehang. Look at the handles even if they are the modern built-in kind, and see if there are screws. Take the handles off, even if the doors and drawers cannot be removed. If the handles are removed, you won't have to measure the material, but, if not, mark off the handle section with pencil.

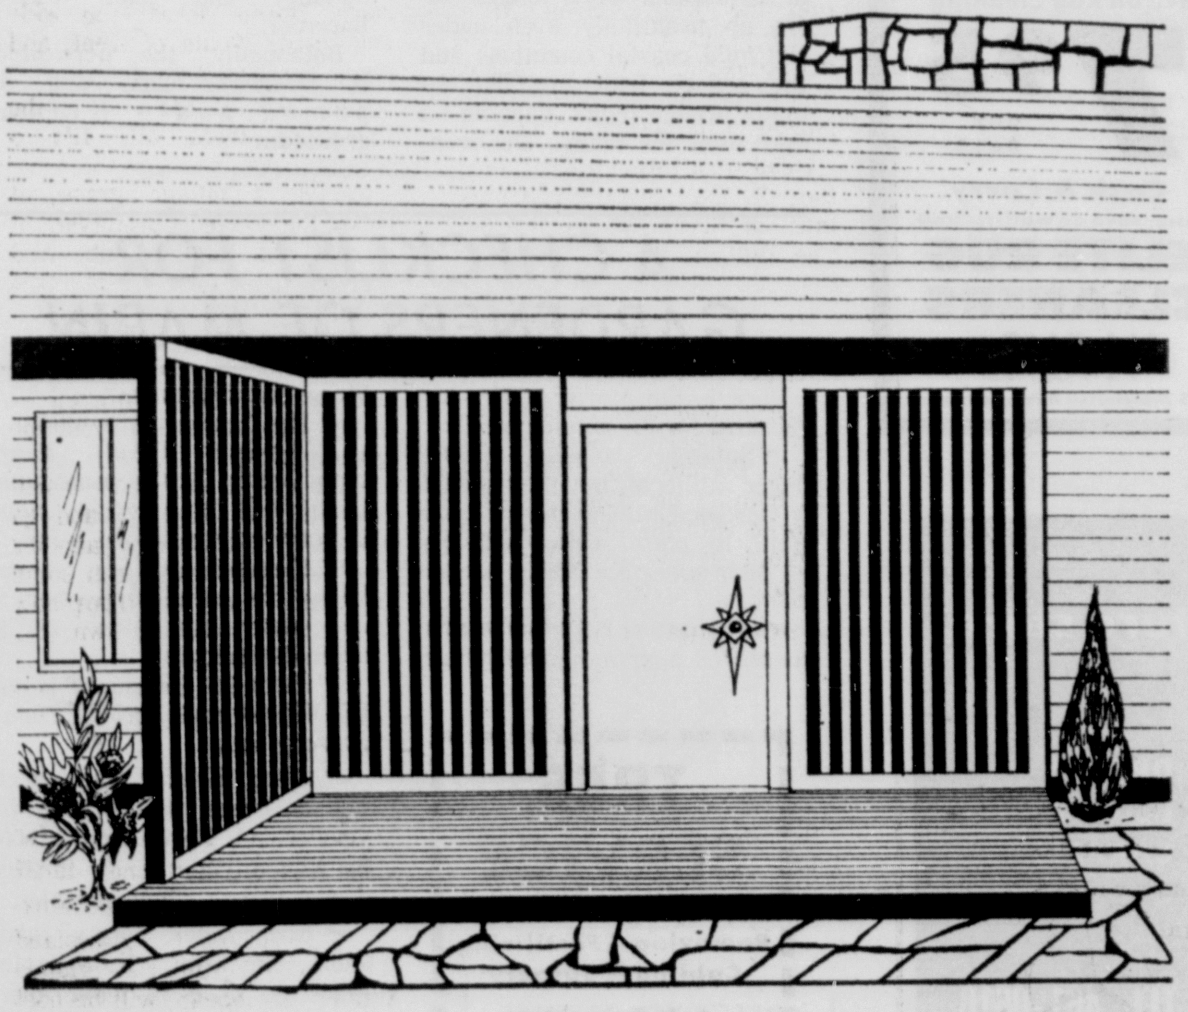
ONCE THE material is marked, you will have to cut out the handle part and this can be slightly tricky, if you have the old-fashioned kind of handle.

Changing the look of cabinets provides a great opportunity to put color into the kitchen where you spend a great deal of time. But if one has too much color on walls and floors, a white-on-white vinyl covering can be put over the cabinets.

There are some wall coverings which are really fun that can be used for this purpose. Visit several stores before you make your selection and have something in mind before you go.

WOULD YOU like to go absolutely wild with white paper and enormous black dots? Are you eager to put on floral so that you'll have a garden of wildflowers all the year round? How about stripes? The variety of colors is endless and delightful. Yellow, orange and turquoise combinations bring sunshine into the kitchen all the year. Pink, green and gold is another cheerful combination.

Whatever you select, make sure it is compatible with the colors in the kitchen now. That doesn't mean you must limit colors. A pattern of three or four colors could be used in addition to those colors now being used if everything goes together. All good colors go together if they are used in the proper way.



THE ADDITION of screens and a low porch deck has resulted in this distinguished entrance area, once plain and uninviting. The screens are spaced Douglas fir two-by-twos in a framework of two-by-fours. They're screwed over existing beveled siding on either side of the door. Projecting section gives privacy to an adjacent window. The deck of two-by-fours of fir on edge raises the porch to door-sill level. (Photo by Homemakers Institute)

A CALIFORNIA tradition and a familiar sight in Marin County is the California Live Oak. The live oak is not a fast-growing shade tree, but it matures more rapidly than some gardeners think. And once it does reach adult stature, it provides a marvelous umbrella against summer's sun and heat, as it is doing in this lucky gardener's yard. The live oak can be planted now. Give it well drained, gravelly soil, if possible, and provide adequate moisture. (Photo courtesy of the California Association of Nurserymen)

Two For Autumn Hues In Marin

Fall color doesn't come naturally to many Marin gardens, but with a little planning and selective planting, we can have a more colorful autumn than many a New Englander.

We are speaking not of flower color, which abounds here, but of color in the traditional warm tones of the maple and other trees which brighten many an eastern countryside with their foliage.

HOW DO WE achieve it? As readers know we often plug the berried shrubs such as pyracantha and cotoneaster for their color fall crops. Now the California Association of Nurserymen suggests another pair that offers not only a harvest of color in their fruit crops but foliage color as well. The two are pomegranate and persimmon.

The shrubbery pomegranate is usually planted for its decorative value. However, many gardeners savor the succulent seeds which fill the warty fruit pods. They may be eaten out of hand, pressed for their juice and/or fermented into wine.

The fruit, either whole or laid open so the seeds are exposed, make wonderful table decorations. They are just as colorful hanging on the tree.

FOR EATING they require heat to mature, so coastal gardeners plant them strictly for decoration.

Persimmon trees are a fabulous sight for many weeks in the autumn. Their foliage colors up beautifully even under our mild coastal conditions and the orange fruit are like so many orange lights, hanging on even after the foliage has dropped in the first weeks of winter.

The fruit is delicious when ripe. However, the taste for it is acquired. Some gardeners swear by it. Others would much rather harvest the crop for their Thanksgiving table centerpiece or simply leave it on the tree until it drops.

BOTH OF THESE colorful fruits are easily grown, requiring no special care. The pomegranate offers the additional benefit of late spring and early summer bloom bright red against the crisp green foliage.

Persimmon offers the added benefit of being a fine all-around tree for any garden, large or small.

Pomegranates can be found in containers and planted now. Persimmons are more difficult to find in containers. If you are not successful in locating some, you can wait until January and plant them bareroot.

Botanically, the persimmon is Diospyros kaki and the pomegranate is Punica granatum.

ANOTHER GOOD COLOR CHOICE

Another good choice for Marin gardeners that can be planted now to yield them both fruit and decoration is the yellow, plum-like loquat. Even those who do not appreciate its bountiful crop enjoy its attractive foliage, its creamy white blooms just before it sets its fruit in late winter, and the ornamental qualities of the fruit itself.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Summer annuals may linger in bloom, but they should be uprooted without delay if you want to plant winter annuals in their place for early winter color.
- Poinsettias may be fed this month or next to insure better bloom for Christmas.
- Feed roses this month if you haven't already. Prune them lightly at the same time. Roses will bloom into winter in many gardens if given care.
- Freesias are best planted before the end of September, as are other cape bulbs such as sparaxis and ixia.
- Plant tall Bearded Iris now for bloom next spring. Choose a sunny bed.
- Start thinking and checking in terms of drainage for your plants. The rains will soon be with us, and many of them do not like to stand in water.
- Keep fallen leaves raked from your lawn. It does the grass no good to leave them lying for an extended period.
- Envy your neighbors who are picking and eating fresh tomatoes? Resolve now to have some of your own next year.

Bulbs To Beautify The City

The use of bulbs and bulbous plants to beautify our cities has become increasingly popular during recent years.

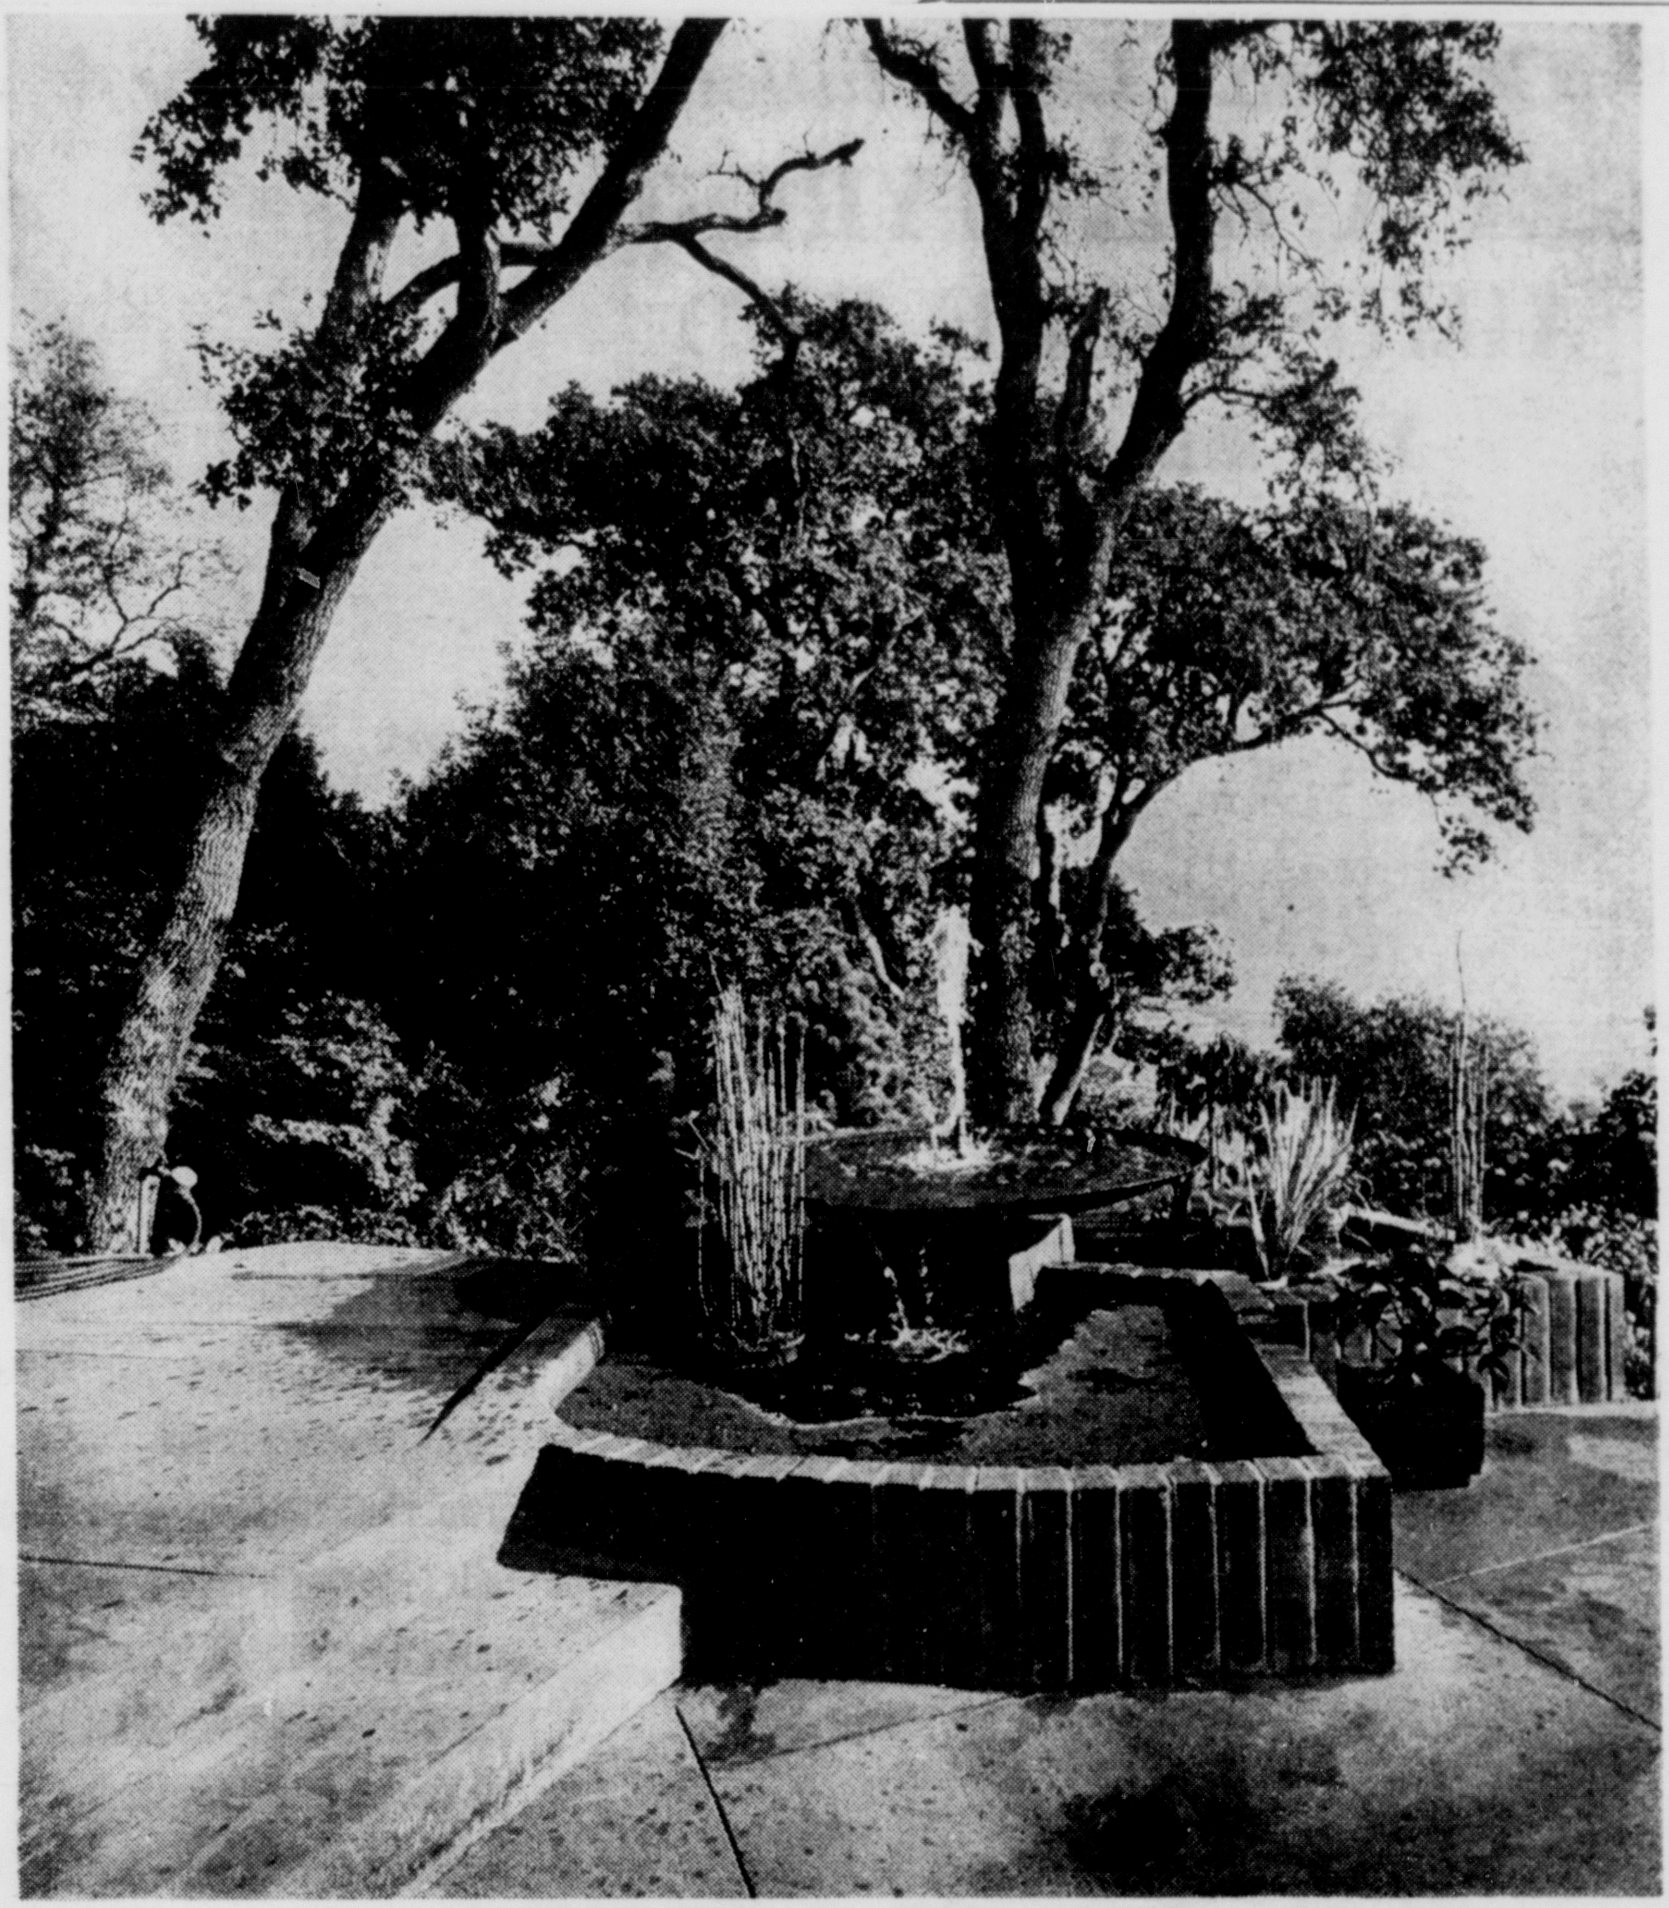
The nice thing about these bulbous plants is that they require a very minimum of space in order to produce striking effects. A narrow center strip dividing a main thoroughfare can become a thing of beauty when planted to a long row of the blue-flowered agapanthus, or Lily of the Nile as you may prefer to call it.

HOME GARDENERS can also borrow from this experience by planting agapanthus in a narrow border beside a driveway.

A bed of Bearded Iris can also make a new city out of the old. All it takes is a pocket of vacant land here and another there planted to these beautiful spring-blooming beauties. The colors are striking, shimmering blues, yellows, white and bronze predominating.

Nerines or "Naked Ladies" as some gardeners call them due to their habit of sending up a bare flowering spike after all foliage has died back, make ideal companions for Lily of the Nile. The pink nerine, constrasting with the vivid blue umbels of agapanthus, can be a really striking combination.

ONE ADDED solution for enhancing the downtown area of most towns — and this can be adapted by home gardeners for patio use, also — is to plant these bulbs in tubs or ceramic containers, or in streetside planters installed by downtown merchants and by garden clubs. This gives spot color in a minimum space and for a minimum effort.



THIS RE-CIRCULATING fountain and fish pond were designed by San Rafael landscape architects Katy and Paul Steinmetz and built by contractor Hans Vielhauer. Water lilies and other water plants are contained in pots in the pool. This keeps the water separated from the dirt, and permits an easy changing of the plants when they grow too large. There are goldfish and mosquito fish in the pond. The pump is concealed in the stand beneath the dish-shaped fountain, which is switched on and off from the house. (Photo by Ken Molino)

An Autumn Newcomer

A NEW FALL introduction from W. Atlee Burpee Co. is this crested celosia, Floradale celosia, that produces a greater number of medium-sized lateral combs than the older varieties. The center comb measures up to eight inches across. The 16-inch plants are low enough for borders or striking beds. And the combs hold up well.

Ralph The Waiter Also Passes Out Menus On Television Show

By ROBERT MUSEL

NEW YORK (UPI) — The sign in the restaurant read: "No service till 3:30. Ralph is on television."

The waiters and a few customers gathered around the small screen to watch Ralph Oliva in his role on NBC-TV's daytime serial, "Another World." He was playing a waiter and doing it superbly.

And why not? When he isn't engaged in his important and continuing role in "Another World" Oliva is one of the waiters in that restaurant.

THE OTHER day Oliva paused on his way to set up the tables for lunch in his present off-screen job to discuss his unusual double life — a waiter in reality and in the fantasy world of television. He said it happened like this:

"I was a clarinetist in the Glenn Miller orchestra during the war but I gave up music to study acting. It's tough for an unknown and I needed a source of income that wouldn't take hours a day of practice. A friend suggested being a waiter.

"I said I had never done any waiting on tables. Said my friend 'You're an actor aren't you? Act like a waiter!' So I went into a restaurant and asked for a job, acting all the time. I must have given a believable performance because they gave me a job and I've been a waiter ever since, combining it with my acting career.

"I USED TO send cards to agents reading: 'I'm appearing at Blank's Restaurant, Mondays through Fridays. Come and see me.' When the role of Charley the waiter came up in 'Another World' a casting director remembered my practical knowledge of the mechanics of the role and sent for me."

Oliva's television part calls for considerable acting outside the prop restaurant. Since he has thus been gainfully employed for a year he was asked why he still felt it necessary to wait on tables in real life.

"You can never have enough security," he said. "Besides being a waiter gives you fantastic experience in meeting people. You can study typists in tea rooms or tycoons in 'The Four Seasons.' Also I've always found restaurant owners considerate about time off. In one place, after filming all night, I fell asleep in the waiters room. The other waiters covered for me.

"WHEN THE owner found me he complained to the union representative who said 'If Ralph makes it you'll be able to say you helped a star.' The owner gave in but grumbled: 'I wish someone would pay me for sleeping.' "

The world of daytime television is a surprising one. Oliva finds himself in demand by autograph collectors, even schoolgirls, and sometimes pauses, while serving the soup or fish, to scribble his name on a menu.

"Not long ago I was working at the Forest Hills Tennis Club while the Monkees were out there," he said. "It sounds ridiculous but kids were yelling 'There's Charley from Another World' and I think I signed more autographs than the Monkees. Me, the waiter."

MONTY HALL, star of "Let's Make a Deal," listens as an audience contestant makes the right decision. Participants are given the opportunity to deal for bigger and better gifts on Sunday nights at 8:30 o'clock, in color on Channels 3 and 4.
